EISENHOWER TO RUN FOR SECOND TERM

GIVES DECISION IN TALK WITH G.O.P. LEADERS

TALKS CONTINUE IN GAS STRIKE; MORE PENALTY SUITS SCHEDULED

Court Refuses to Order Laclede Workers Back at Once, Sets Injunction Hearing for Tomorrow.

Efforts to settle the nine-day old strike of Laclede Gas Co. workers continued today as representatives of three union locals and company officials resumed negotiations at the old Federal Building.

Additional suits seeking financial penalties against the union were expected to be filed today or tomorrow by the state of Missouri, which seized the company last week under the King-Thompson act.

The state's request for an immediate order to restrain strikers from continuing the walkout was denied yesterday by Circuit Judge Ivan Lee Holt Jr. He set a hearing for 10 a.m. tomorrow on the state's suit asking for a temporary injunction against the strike.

In Jefferson City today, Gov. Phil M. Donnelly declined to say what the state's next step to end the strike would be, pending a ruling on the injunction suit. However, it was learned that an additional move by state officials was being contemplated.

Union Meeting Tonight.

A progress report on contract negotiations will be presented to the 2200 gas workers, members of the AFL-CIO Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers, at a mass meeting a 7 o'clock tonight at a union hall at 6141 Etzel avenue, Wellston.

William Wynn, International representative of the striking locals, said that if an injunction is issued by the court, union executives will submit the question of whether to obey the order to the strikers. The union contended in a petition filed in circuit court yesterday that the King-Thompson act is invalid and that all acts taken under it by state officials are void.

No new areas in St. Louis and St. Louis county were reported to be without gas today. Company officials estimated that service has been cut off to from 18,000 to 20,000 homes and businesses since the strike began July 1.

Barnes Hospital officials said today that fluctuations in gas pressure, apparently a result of the strike, had impaired the full usefulness of a flame photometer, a gas-burning device used in the chemical analysis of patients' blood samples.

They added that the difficulty was an inconvenience and was not serious. The process of testing samples has been slowed down but the machine still can be used, they explained.

Negotiating on Wages.

Union and company negotiators yesterday began discussing the issues of wages and such fringe benefits as holidays and vacations, after agreeing to let attorneys for both sides attempt to work out a solution to the principal dispute concerning "riser" connections in gas lines.

Laclede officials want the job of installing these connections turned over to private contractors. The union has insisted that the work continue to be performed by company employes. A "riser" is a T-joint from which pipes run to gas appliances and heating units.

A union spokesman characterized progress in the talks on wages and other issues as "not too good."

Initially, the company proposed a 4½ per cent general wage increase for the year that began July 1 and an additional 3½ per cent increase for the following 12-month period. It was estimated that this would amount to an average hourly wage rise of 9.7 cents the first year and 7.9 cents the second, or a total of 17.6 cents.

$35,000 Already Sought.

Suits seeking financial penalties totaling $35,000 against the striking locals and union officials were filed Saturday by Attorney General John M. Dalton. Penalties asked were $10,000 against each local $1000 against each of five union officers.

Under the King-Thompson act, a fine of $10,000 may be sought against a union for each day that it strikes against a public utility after state seizure of the utility.

Dalton has said that some other type of legal action, in addition to the penalty and injunction suits, may be taken soon by the state, although he declined to specify what this would be.

REDS SAY U.S. WARPLANES INVADED SOVIET AIR SPACE

Protest to Dulles Charges Craft Flew Up to 320 Kilometers Into Russian Areas.

WASHINGTON, July 10 (AP)—Russia protested today that United States military planes have engaged in what it called "gross violation of Soviet air space."

Soviet Ambassador Georgi N. Zarubin handed a protest note to Secretary of State Dulles.

He told newsmen it charges that American military aircraft flew as much as 320 kilometers into Russian territory on July 4, 5 and 9.

He said the planes "invaded the Soviet air space" over Minsk, Pinsk, Kalingrad, Vilna and several other cities.

"Some of them invaded our space for two hours and one half," he said.

Zarubin, accompanied by an embassy aid, spent 10 minutes in Dulles's fifth floor office. He talked to reporters in the hall afterward and in the elevator as it brought him to the ground floor.

Speaking through an interpreter, he said:

"I handed a note to the Secretary of State, Mr. Dulles, concerning the gross violation of air space of the Soviet Union by military planes of the U.S.A."

The State Department had no immediate comment.

WASHINGTON, July 10 (AP)—Home run blasts by Willie Mays and Stan Musial paced the National League to a 7 to 3 victory over the American League today in the twenty-third All-Star baseball game at Griffith Stadium. Ted Williams and Mickey Mantle homered for the Americans.

A crowd of 28,843, paying $105,982.50, saw the Nationals win their sixth triumph in the last seven years. The American League still has the over-all lead in the classic, 13 games to 10.

Musial hit his fifth All-Star game homer, a record, in the seventh. In the eighth the St. Louis Cardinals' star was taken from the game after nearly colliding with Ken Boyer, also of the Cardinals, in making a diving catch of Williams's long fly.

EDEN AND LLOYD PLANNING TO VISIT RUSSIA NEXT MAY

LONDON, July 10 (AP)—Prime Minister Eden announced today that he and Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd will visit the Soviet Union next May.

Eden told the House of Commons he and Lloyd plan to leave May 5 for the visit, which will last about 10 days.

Premier Bulganin and Soviet Communist party chieftain Nikita Khrushchev extended the invitation in a visit to Britain in April.

SHARES GO UP ON NEWS EISENHOWER WILL RUN

NEW YORK, July 10 (UP)—Road building machinery makers and other heavy industry shares led the stock market higher today.

Nearly all sections moved higher and volume increased after Senator William F. Knowland announced that President Eisenhower would run again.

Among the strongest in the makers of earth moving machinery was aCterpillar Tractor, which at its high was up nearly 7 points. Aluminum, copper, oil, chemical and steel shares provided good gainers. A sizable list ran up 3 points or better. Many others gained 2.

WORTMAN TELLS U.S. JURY ABOUT TAXES, SLUGGING

Gang Boss Answers All Questions Put to Him in Hour and 25 Minute Session.

Frank (Buster) Wortman, East Side gang boss, testified for one hour and 25 minutes today before a federal grand jury at Springfield, Ill., which is conducting an investigation to determine if Madison county gamblers have been failing to report their incomes.

Wortman answered all questions put to him, United States Attorney John B. Stoddart Jr., of the Southern District of Illinois, said. He was the only witness subpenaed today in the inquiry.

The Government specifically is seeking to determine whether Wortman and other gamblers operating on the East Side have been paying a $50-a-year occupational tax and the 10 per cent tax on gross income.

The investigation was started last April 6 after United States District Judge Charles G. Briggle sharply criticized Madison county authorities for lack of law enforcement. Wortman lives near Collinsville, in St. Clair county, but most of his gambling activity has been in Madison county.

Stoddart said Wortman was questioned about a report that an internal revenue agent investigating his income was slugged in the Paddock Tavern, 429 St. Louis avenue, East St. Louis, July 1. The Paddock is one of several East Side drinking establishments owned by Wortman.

"We have established an agent was slugged in the Paddock," Stoddart said, "but we still don't know who did it. The agent was denounced as a stool pigeon and a meddler after identifying himself."

The prosecutor said the Government also inquired into the mysterious man-made island being constructed under Wortman's direction in the Bethel School area southeast of Collinsville. It has been reported the island, surrounded by a deep moat, will be a gambling casino or gang hideout.

Stoddart said the agent slugged in the Paddock was an employe of the auditing department of the Internal Revenue Service. He was in the tavern

PRESIDENT LISTS 15 LEGISLATIVE ITEMS HE WANTS AT THIS SESSION

4 Billion Foreign Aid and School Construction Bill at Top—He Telephones Democratic Leaders.

WASHINGTON, July 10 (AP)—President Eisenhower today tabbed 15 legislative proposals—headed by foreign aid funds and school construction — as matters he hopes Congress will act on before adjournment.

Mr. Eisenhower pushed his requests by personal telephone calls to Democratic leaders here after talking them over with Republican Senate and House leaders at a meeting in Gettysburg, Pa.

Senate Democratic leader Lyndon Johnson of Texas disclosed the President had telephoned him and House Speaker Rayburn (Dem.), Texas, about the impending adjournment of Congress and "certain legislative matters."

Talk About Health.

Johnson said Mr. Eisenhower listed several matters that he hoped would have attention before Congress quits, and exchanged pleasantries about their health.

The Senate Democratic leader would not quote the President on legislative desires, but said Mr. Eisenhower thanked him for several matters that Congress had handled.

However, Senate Republican leader William F. Knowland of California said in Gettysburg that Mr. Eisenhower had 15 "priority" items which he hoped would get through Congress before adjournment.

The foreign aid bill led the list, Knowland said, adding that Mr. Eisenhower was hopeful the appropriation finally voted would be in "substantial" accord with the four-billion-dollar ceiling.

Knowland said, too, the President and the G.O.P. leadership hope the federal aid to school construction program can be reinstated. It was killed in the House last week.

Reasons for Opposition.

Many Republicans voted against the bill on ground that it had departed from the Administration-recommended formula for distributing a proposed $1,600,000,000 school construction fund. Mr. Eisenhower had proposed that needs of the states be taken into account but the bill provided for distributing the funds on the basis of school-age population.

Southern Democrats opposed the bill because of a provision to bar aid to schools segregating pupils by race.

After the House vote, many legislators regarded the bill as dead for this session, but Knowland said "we certainly haven't abandoned the possibility" of getting a substitute measure.

Other "priority" items listed by Knowland were: Customs simplification, housing legislation, postal rate increases, the Frying Pan dam project for the Rocky Mountain region, extension of the Defense Production Act, extension of the Contract Renegotiation Act, military survivors' benefit bill, executive pay bill, Niagara power project, immigration and refugee law amendments, civil rights legislation, flood insurance and Social Security Act amendments.

Knowland said he expects to get "a substantially good batting average" on this program.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY KNOWLAND AFTER MEETING AT GETTYSBURG

Senator Says President Feels Better Than When He Stayed in Race Following Heart Attack.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., July 10 (AP)—President Eisenhower is going to run for a second term.

Republican Senate Leader Knowland disclosed this at a news conference today after Republican congressional leaders had conferred with the President.

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty stood by nodding affirmation.

Knowland said the President had told the Republican leaders he felt in better shape than he did when he made his Feb. 29 announcement that he would seek re-election despite the heart attack he had suffered last Septemoer.

Comment by Knowland that "we are looking forward to a very vigorous and active campaign under his leadership," led to the President's indirect announcement.

Reporters asked Knowland whether the President "told you he is going to keep his hat in the ring?"

"I'm telling you precisely that," Knowland replied.

'No Doubt in Anyone's Mind.

He added that Mr. Eisenhower "left no doubt in anyone's mind" that he would run again despite his June 9 intestinal operation.

The President himself appeared before reporters and photographers before and after the meeting with Capitol Hill leaders, which lasted an hour and seven minutes.

He looked a little pale and obviously had lost weight. The rough-textured sport shirt he wore was loose around his neck. But his color was better and his step was firmer than when he left Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington a week ago last Saturday.

Knowland was asked whether Mr. Eisenhower had given some second thoughts to his decision to run again in the light of his recent attack of ileitis, which followed by nine months the heart attack he suffered at Denver.

"The fact remains he's in the race," Knowland replied.

He said he regarded Mr. Eisenhower's comments today as a "continuation" of his Feb. 29 announcement that he would accept renomination.

Knew of Press Conference.

Knowland was asked also whether the President had authorized him to make the statement about second term plans.

"No," Knowland replied, "but he knew we were going to meet the press afterward and he knew we always try to make frank reports."

Under questioning, Knowland said the matter of a vice presidential selection was not discussed.

Vice President Nixon, who had been invited by Mr. Eisenhower to make up his own mind and advise the President what he wanted to do, has said he would run.

Mr. Eisenhower's second major illness had touched off world-wide speculation on whether the President would stay in the race for a second term. Earlier speculation, which followed the heart attack, had subsided only three months earlier when the President announced he would seek another term.

Despite the suspense which built up since Mr. Eisenhower's intestinal disorder, there had been a growing expectation during the past several days that the Chief Executive would remain in the race.

Legislative Discussion.

The announced purpose of today's meeting with the Republican leaders in Congress was a discussion of the Administration's program for the closing days of the present Congress.

But it was obvious in advance that the Congressmen were as much interested in second term plans as in legislative hopes.

There was no definite advance indication, however, that the answer to their questions would be forthcoming.

Reporters expected little more than a routine briefing on a legislative planning conference when they gathered in the sparsely furnished office of the president of Gettysburg College, where the conference had been held, to question th Pres-

DEMOCRATS PICK GOV. CLEMENT AS PARTY KEYNOTER

Tennessean Approved by Candidates, but His Selection Was Not Unanimous.

CHICAGO, July 10 (AP)—Gov. Frank G. Clement of Tennessee, regarded as friendly to Adlai E. Stevenson, was selected yesterday to keynote the Democratic national convention.

He was named by the party's convention arrangements committee after a three-hour meeting.

Clement, a fiery orator and considered a possible vice-presidential candidate, did not receive a unanimous vote of the committee, National Chairman Paul M. Butler said.

Butler said the committee's 13 members gave a "full discussion of each of 17 or 18 possible selections." Clement was picked, he said, "because of his familiarity with the issues and his capacity to discuss them fluently and capably, and the impression he has made around the country."

"I wouldn't say it (Clement's selection) was unanimous but all feel that a good decision was made," Butler said. "I don't consider it a victory for anyone except the Democratic party."

In Nashville, the 36-year-old Governor, informed of his selection to keynote the convention on opening night Aug. 13 in Chicago, said:

"I did not expect this assignment. There were many other capable men who could have done an excellent job. But I'll do the very best I can to represent the Democratic party and the American people."

Although Clement has shied away from publicly committing himself to any Democratic presidential candidate, he praised Stevenson at the recent Governors' conference, describing him as the "greatest candidate ever to be denied the presidency of the United States."

Democratic leaders apparently closely considered Clement's views on the potentially explosive segregation issue.

He has avoided taking strong stands either way on the issue. He was quoted at the Governors' conference as saying that no public schools in Tennessee had been or would be desegregated without a court order. The only exception, he said, was Oak Ridge, Tenn., which is operated by the Federal Government.

Butler said he felt Clement

Stevenson Glad Eisenhower Feels Well Enough to Run

Announcement 'Not News' to Truman — Means G.O.P. Landslide, Martin Says.

CHICAGO, July 10 (AP)—Adlai E. Stevenson, Democratic presidential candidate, said today he is "delighted President Eisenhower feels in good enough health to run again for the presidency."

Former President Harry S. Truman said with a smile that the disclosure that Mr. Eisenhower is still a candidate for re-election "is not headline news to me."

Stevenson said in a statement, "The nation will benefit in the coming months from a searching and vigorous debate on our urgent problems."

Asked if he believed that Mr. Eisenhower made up his own mind to seek a second term, the former President said:

"Nobody can make that decision but the President himself. I know because I have had the experience."

After the announcement by Senate Republican leader William F. Knowland of California that Mr. Eisenhower would remain in the race, Knowland and other G.O.P. leaders flew back to Washington from Gettysburg, Pa., where they had conferred with the President. They all

MERCURY DROPS TO 62 AT 6 A.M., COOLEST IN MONTH

This morning was the coolest in St. Louis in more than a month. Temperatures slid to 62 degrees by 6 a.m., and St. Louisans enjoyed a night of cool sleeping. Prospects are for higher readings tomorrow and Thursday.

The temperature has not been lower since June 4 when it dipped to a reading of 61 degrees.

Rain and cool air masses from the north have kept morning readings below normal since July 4. This morning's drop can be attributed to a cold front from the northwest, Assistant Weatherman Arthur A. Rausch said. When the front passes St. Louis, southerly winds will raise temperatures and bring moisture, he said.

---IS GOOD FOR THE COUNTRY

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

Martin Confuses 'General Motors' and 'General Staff.'

WASHINGTON, July 10—Representative Martin (Rep.), Massachusetts, the House minority leader, startled his colleagues yesterday when he said he based his views on foreign aid on "the judgment of the President and General Motors."

As laughter died down, it became apparent that the Republican leader had meant to refer to the "general staff"—a term he uses interchangeably for the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Eisenhower's News--Did He Plan It or Did He Just Let It Pop Out?

WASHINGTON, July 10 (AP)—Senator Styles Bridges (Rep.), New Hampshire, said today he did not know whether President Eisenhower's disclosure of second term plans at a conference with legislative leaders was prearranged or "just popped out."

On their return from the Gettysburg conference, Bridges, who heads the Senate Republican policy committee, and Senate Republican leader Knowland of California, described the events this way:

Republican leaders discussed the legislative program with the President for about 20 minutes before they got around to the foreign aid program. At this point they quoted the President as saying:

"I feel very deeply about this and I intend to campaign very vigorously and hard on this issue before the country this fall."

With a broad grin, Knowland broke in at this point:

(White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty announced with a broad smile last week that he had discussed politics with his chief but declined to say whether the President indicated he would run again.)

Bridges said that in response to Knowland's comment, Mr. Eisenhower said:

"Why shouldn't I run? Last Feb. 29 I surveyed all of the reasons pro and con when I announced my decision. I'm in much better condition today than I was then.

"I have had a condition that has bothered me from time to time for years and my doctors say that I am better now than I have been before."

No French Art, Just U.S. Family On Democratic Convention Book

CHICAGO, July 10 (AP)—Democratic party Chairman Paul Butler said yesterday that the party's souvenir convention booklet will have "no French art on the cover."

He said the cover picture will depict "an American father, an American mother and an American child—the American family in which the Democratic party is interested."

It was an oblique reference to a Republican decision canceling plans for reproducing on the G.O.P. program cover three figures drawn from a sculpture used to illustrate Dante's Inferno.

"We all thought it was very apt," Butler said, "for the G.O.P. first to have decided upon a painting whose title was 'Abandon Hope, All Ye Who Enter Here.'"

Eisenhower and Lincoln Finally Chosen for G.O.P. Cover.

The New York Times News Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10—A silhouette of a medallion bearing likenesses of Abraham Lincoln and Dwight D. Eisenhower has been chosen for the cover of the official Republican national convention program, it was disclosed yesterday by Bruce Ellis, a public relations man in charge of the program project.

The new design, which will have a background of San Francisco scenes, supplants an "art" cover to which Mayor George Christopher and other Republicans objected last week.

The original design was a representation of Auguste Rodin's "The Three Shades." Their sculptured nude figures show them in a state of dejection. This, according to the mayor, was hardly suitable for a Republican convention with a theme of "peace, progress and prosperity." The convention opens in the Cow Palace here on Aug. 20.

Ellis said the likeness of Lincoln was added to the President's to symbolize the centenary of the Republican party.

Eisenhower's Newsmen Did He Plan It or Did He Just Let It Pop Out?

General's Stand Vindicates Congress's Position, Symington Says—More Cash for Research Urged.

WASHINGTON, July 10 (UP) —Gen. Nathan F. Twining was quoted today as supporting the $800,000,000 increase in Air Force funds which Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson has opposed.

Twining, air chief of staff, testified at a closed session of the Senate Armed Services Committee on his recent trip to Russia. He said the Russians had made "undeniable strides" in war plane development but "have not outdistanced us."

In a statement released to reporters, Twining urged more spending on United States research and development to protect what he called our "qualitative lead" over the U.S.S.R.

In his secret testimony, Twining supported the $800,000,000 increase Congress made in the Administration's Air Force budget, it was reported. Wilson has said he has no immediate plans for using the money to speed production of the B-52 jet bomber.

Quoted by Symington.

Senator Stuart Symington (Dem.), Missouri, quoted Twining as saying that if he were a Senator he would have voted for the increase. Symington said Twining asserted it was important to increase the program for the coming year, as recommended by Congress.

Symington added that Twining's stand "completely vindicates the position taken by some of us that we should give due recognition to the tremendous advances in Soviet air power."

Twining in his statement said as he has before that the United States is still ahead of Russia qualitatively.

The Air Force chief of staff added, however, that his eight-day visit to Russia "substantially strengthened our previous assessments that the U.S.S.R., while certainly not abreast of us today, can and is progressively narrowing the technological lead of the West generally and of the United States in particular."

Twining cautioned that with the heavy emphasis the Russians are placing on technical education, the United States must "reckon on the possibility of their achieving a scientific break-through and consequent technological surprise in new weapons."

Trip Too Limited.

Twining said his trip was too limited and controlled "to provide a basis for any substantial revision of previous estimates" of Soviet air power.

Twining added, however, that "our visit did have the positive effect of strengthening our previous judgment that the rate of progress and improvement in Soviet air weapons—backed by a massive scientific and industrial effort—is such as to give us cause for serious thought about the future."

In respect to quality of aircraft as of now, "we can be assured that we have not lost our lead," he said. "This was our judgment before we went to the Soviet Union; it still stands."

On the basis of aircraft displayed by the Russians, Twining said that it is his judgment that "despite the undeniable strides made by Soviet designers, they have not out-distanced us."

"Nothing we saw," Twining said, "could honestly be described as being superior to the best United States aircraft in comparable categories."

Russians Bid for Exchanges.

By the Associated Press.

Twining said the Russians in inviting him to visit Moscow indicated a Soviet desire to make exchange of military information an alternative to President Eisenhower's aerial inspection proposal.

"First, Soviet officials at all levels constantly repeated the hope that our visit would be the first of a series of encounters leading to wider exchange," Twining told the committee.

"They plainly desire an early invitation to pay a reciprocal visit to the United States.

"Second, the nature of the Soviet overtures indicated a definite desire on their part to establish a pattern for the exchange of military information on their terms as a possible alternative to the President's aerial inspection proposal which they continue to reject."

On the basis of what he saw or was told, Twining gave these conclusions:

1. "The Soviet Air Force is engaged in the development of a surprisingly wide variety of aircraft."

2. The design of most of these aircraft reflects "a high level of scientific and engineering talent," and offers proof that Soviet designers "are pioneering on their own in the field of modern aircraft development."

3. Three experimental fighters shown at Tushino "appeared to need still further tests and development before they can be put into series production."

"It was also our general conclusion that in the latest operational types as well Soviet designers are having trouble achieving stability at high speeds," Twining said. "This was evidenced, among other things, by their extensive use of wing 'fences' and foils to adjust the stream of air over wing and control surface."

4. "Nevertheless, the widening variety of aircraft already in the Soviet operational and experimental inventories is clear evidence of "a broad understanding of the state of the aeronautical art and of Soviet determination to advance therein on a very wide front."

Twining said he and his party got the impression the Soviet aviation command is made up of "tough, aggressive, resourceful leaders."

Twining stressed that he and his party got "only two good looks" at Russian planes, once during the big air show at Tushino airfield and later at Kubinka airfield.

Truman Says He's Still Neutral After Breakfast With Stevenson

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

CHICAGO, July 10 (UP)— Former President Harry S. Truman had breakfast with Adlai Stevenson today but said he is still neutral toward the field of Democratic presidential aspirants.

Truman told a news conference following his private breakfast with Stevenson that both he and Stevenson agreed that "the Democrats will win in a walk this fall."

But he refused to be drawn into a discussion of exactly what was said at the breakfast.

He insisted that he will go to the Democratic national convention here Aug. 13 as a "very much entertaine dobserver" and still neutral toward presidential hopefuls.

"I am not making statements to put me in accord with anybody until after the convention has met," Truman said.

Opinions at Convention Time.

He was asked whether this meant he might take part in political maneuvers during the convention.

"I will express opinions at the time the convention meets," he said. "I don't think it would be proper to take part in the pre-convention campaign—either for anybody or against anybody."

A reporter recalled that Truman has previously backed Stevenson.

"I was a Stevenson man in 1952," Truman said. "Subsequently I became neutral as soon as the pre-convention fight developed."

He refused to discuss President Eisenhower's health, and whether it will be a campaign issue.

"When the President is not physically fit, I don't think it is a proper thing to discuss," Truman said. ". . . I like him personally but I don't agree with him politically."

Truman said he planned, however, to make an issue of Mr. Eisenhower's record as a "part-time President from 1952 until he suffered a heart attack last fall."

'Strong' Rights Plank.

He predicted that the 1956 Democratic platform will include a "strong" civil rights plank. He said it could be written along the same lines as the 1948 and 1952 planks.

Truman was asked what he thought of the campaign conducted by Stevenson so far.

"I think Stevenson has conducted a very good campaign and I think he's learned a lot since 1952," he said.

Stevenson praised Truman for his "statesmanship" during his term of office.

Stevenson said he has no doubt that Truman, on his recent trip abroad, was "the best American emissary to Europe since the war . . . yet never once did our government take official notice of his journey."

Truman received a $72,000 check at a luncheon from the All-Chicago Committee for the Truman Library. The money will go toward completion of the Truman library at Independence, Mo.

SOVIET UNION'S TOP WOMAN RED TO VISIT BRITAIN

MOSCOW, July 10 (AP)— The world's most powerful woman Communist, Ekaterina Furtseva, will get her first look at the capitalist world this week.

It was learned yesterday she will head a 16-member delegation on a tour of Britain as a guest of the British Parliament.

She is the first secretary of the Moscow City Communist party group, largest in the Soviet Union. She is also a Supreme Soviet deputy and a candidate member of the Communist party's Presidium.

No other woman has ever attained such rank in Russia since the days when empresses ruled.

The group will leave Moscow by plane Wednesday.

PROPELLER PIECE RIPS OFF; WOMAN IN PLANE KILLED

(Picture in Everyday Magazine.)

WINDSOR, Ont., July 10 (UP) —Part of a propeller ripped loose from a Trans-Canada Viscount airliner 19,000 feet over Flat Rock, Mich., yesterday and smashed into the fuselage, decapitating a woman and injuring five other persons.

The four-engined, turbo-prop airship, en route from Chicago to Toronto, Ont., with 31 passengers and four crew members, made an emergency landing at Windsor airport on three engines.

The dead woman was Mrs. Robert Lippert, wife of Dr. Robert Lippert of Rochester, Minn. She was sitting with her two sons, Robert, 3 years old, and James, 21 months, who were not injured. The injured were Christopher Dumbell, Dubuque, Ia., leg fracture; his wife, Donna, a leg injury; their son, Donald, 3, leg injury; Donovan Stevens, Mundelein, Ill., neck cuts, and Rita Tobin, stewardess, shock.

The propeller slashed back into the cabin, scattering insulation and some glass. At Flat Rock, police found part of the blade in a field.

NAVY IS ACCUSED OF ATTEMPT TO 'CENSOR HISTORY'

House Investigator Says Service Tried to Suppress Story of Cruiser's Sinking.

WASHINGTON, July 10 (UP)—House investigators disclosed today the Navy had sought to prevent publication of a story telling of the World War II sinking of the cruiser Indianapolis because it might have discouraged enlistments.

Chairman John E. Moss (Dem.), California, of a House Government Operations subcommittee accused the Navy of trying to "censor history."

Moss, whose subcommittee is investigating suppression of public information, said a "rich field of American history would be permanently withheld from the American people" if such a policy were carried out.

The story of the sinking was written by Capt. G. W. Campbell, a Navy public information officer in the Third (New York) Naval District, and sold to the Saturday Evening Post.

Subcommittee testimony revealed the Navy threatened to censure Campbell even after the original Navy decision had been overruled by the Defense Department and Navy Secretary Charles S. Thomas.

Campbell wrote the article last year for publication on the tenth anniversary of the July 31, 1945, sinking of the Indianapolis in the Philippine sea with loss of 880 lives. It was the last major loss of United States forces in World War II.

Capt. J. D. Lamade, acting Navy chief of information, wrote Campbell on June 6, 1955, refusing clearance for the story.

"Encouragement for publication of this material by any person in naval service is not in the best interests of the Navy," Lamade wrote.

The Saturday Evening Post appealed to the Defense Department and the Navy decision was reversed.

Later, however, Campbell received a letter dated July 19, 1955, from Adm. J. L. Holloway, chief of naval personnel, threatening to censure Campbell.

Moss said the Navy's original decision was arbitrary and that Navy officials would be called to explain their apparent use of "coercive tactics" against Campbell, even after the Defense Department and Thomas had ruled in his favor.

The case was aired during testimony by Assistant Defense Secretary Robert Tripp Ross and Defense Information Director C. Herschel Schooley.

MOONSHINER IN HOT WATER AS STREAM CATCHES FIRE

RUBIERA, Italy, July 10 (AP) —Residents of this central Italian village fled in fear when a stream flowing through town suddenly caught fire.

The fire spread and damaged one house and small machine shop.

Police said it was real fire water. An Italian moonshiners' still, engaged in producing illegal alcohol, caught fire due to the hot weather and spewed the flames into the nearby stream.

Blast in Red Ship in Suez.

SUEZ, July 10 (UP)—A Russian tanker's engine exploded in port here today, shortly after the ship unloaded 12,000 tons of crude oil at an Egyptian refinery. One crewman of the tanker Karch lost an arm in the accident. The ship was severely damaged but there was no serious fire.

E. GERMANS HOLD 'U.S. AGENTS' IN POLISH RIOT PLOT

Red Information Chief Says Men Had Orders to Stir Up Bread, Freedom Revolt.

BERLIN, July 10 (AP)—Communist East Germany announced today it had arrested "United States intelligence agents" who had orders to stir up the recent bread and freedom revolt in the Polish city of Poznan.

The announcement was made by Fritz Beyling, East German information chief, at a news conference. He did not disclose the nationality, names or numbers of the men arrested.

He indicated they were seized before the revolt broke out about two weeks ago.

The Communists have been issuing propaganda statements blaming "western agents" for fomenting the Poznan revolt. A Polish commission has reported that the underlying causes were justified grievances of the workers.

Beyling told reporters:

"We have arrested United States intelligence agents who were operating from West Berlin or West Germany and were assigned to work at Poznan. American dollars were found in their possession."

Called Provocation.

An indication of how the Communists intend to play up the arrests was seen in a statement by Col. Ernst Borrmann of the East German secret police that "very likely" Western newsmen would be admitted to the trials of arrested men.

Borrmann said that items confiscated from men arrested in East Germany were "clear proof that Poznan was a provocation prepared a long time ago."

At the same news conference the Reds produced a German identified as Horst Hesse, who claimed he stole a safe containing valuable documents from the United States Army intelligence office in Wuerzburg, West Germany, last May.

Hesse said he made off with the safe while employed by the office to recruit Germans for a United States intelligence network.

East German Premier Grotewohl announced May 29 that 137 persons whom he called American agents had been arrested in East Germany after a German defected to the East with the files of an "American espionage center." Grotewohl said the files contained important documents including 2000 West German identity cards and 1000 press cards.

Denial by Army.

The United States Army in Germany has denied that any such safe or files have been stolen from any of its offices and has labeled the Red report a complete fabrication.

Hesse spoke to western and Communist newsmen with the aid of a long typewritten document over which he frequently stumbled, as if unfamiliar with it.

Under questioning, Hesse admitted he had no knowledge of English although he declared he had worked in the Wuerzburg office about two years.

"I didn't have to," he explained. "The Americans all spoke German."

Czech Papers Report Arrest of Four as U. S. Spies.

VIENNA, July 10 (AP) — Czech papers arriving here yesterday reported the arrest of four Czechs charged with being spies for the United States. One was quoted as saying United States secret agents were trying to promote unrest in Czechoslovakia and East Germany similar to that which exploded in rioting in the Polish city of Poznan.

France Proposes Air Surveys In 'Sensitive Areas' of World

ALVIN H. GOLDSTEIN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., July 10—Aerial surveys of "sensitive areas" in Western Europe, Russia and the United States to prevent threatening concentrations of troops and arms was proposed today by Jules Moch of France in the United Nations Disarmament Commission.

Moch deplored Soviet rejection of the proposal of President Eisenhower for mutual aerial inspection by Russia and the United States, adding that the "debate had moved from the technical to the emotional level."

Even the value of aerial inspection is declining as "future warfare tends toward complete annihilation," he said.

"As long as this method remains effective, priority must be given to its application in the sensitive sectors where concentrations are normally to be effected," Moch asserted.

"This amounts to proposing regular aerial reconnaissance over Western Europe, and along the border between the two worlds in Scandinavia, in Thrace (the Balkans) or in the Middle East.

Add American Zone.

"If we add, for the sake of reciprocity rather than effectiveness, a zone in American equal in size to the small area of the U.S.S.R., which is included in the sensitive sectors, we can imagine a compromise between the 'all' proposed by one side, and the 'nothing' advocated by the other, with the possibility of subsequently extending the photographed sector."

Moch foresaw that his solution "had little or no chance of being accepted." He predicted Moscow would find it excessive and the United States "inadequate." He asked each delegation, however, to "think it over" if either retained hope of reconciling their respective demands.

"If neither one can rally the other to his point of view," Moch asserted, "there is no other choice than to accept the indefinite interruption of all disarmament, or to seek a compromise solution such as the one I have outlined which makes it possible to achieve the essential objective of aerial reconnaissance: the detection, not of certain factories, but of eventual concentrations."

Couldn't Find Stockpiles.

In preliminary remarks, Moch asserted that although aerial inspection would permit detection of nuclear production by identifying plants where it was carried on, it would not enable discovery of hidden stockpiles of atomic and hydrogen weapons. It would, however, augment ground observation at fixed control points, as proposed by the Kremlin, he said.

Moch joined other Western delegates in expressing "reservations" of the unilateral reduction of armed forces recently announced by the Soviet Union. He did think, however, that the move had value as "the symbol of an internal, if not international, relaxation of tension" in that it disclosed "diminishing fear" of the West in the minds of Soviet leaders.

He was therefore optimistic despite previous frustrations in the disarmament negotiations, Moch concluded. He did not think nations were committed to an eventual war of destruction and did not want to continue preparing for it. He saw adoption of a comprehensive disarmament plan to end the deadly competition.

Restrictions Needed.

Any "partial" disarmament plan must impose restrictions on the manufacture of nuclear weapons and freezing of present stockpiles at current levels as well as reductions of military manpower, Moch said.

Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. of the United States took issue sharply with Deputy Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko who last week declared the Eisenhower "open sky" plan "would do no good to anybody or for the cause" of universal arms reduction, and described the proposal as "notorious." Lodge objected to the "belligerence and insincerity" of Gromyko's remarks.

He recalled that the President's suggestion had been approved by every member of the United Nations except Russia and its satellite states at the General Assembly last year. The words of the Soviet representative expressed contempt for the 56 nations which praised the proposal, Lodge added.

Using Stalin's Words.

"Mr. Gromyko is using hard words—the words of Stalin and Vishinsky (the late Andrei Y. Vishinsky)," Lodge continued. He asked whether the Russian motive for the attack was part of a plan to make effective disarmament impossible and to substitute "trick disarmament" which would still permit "surprise attack" by an aggressor.

Anthony Nutting of Britain also took Gromyko to task for accusing the western nations of standing behind their propositions only "for as long as they thought the U.S.S.R. would reject such a proposal." He also angrily denied Gromyko's charge that the West had abandoned its own suggestions of armed force maximums.

Nutting submitted an amendment to the western declaration of disarmament principles calling for "limitation" of the testing of nuclear weapons "at appropriate stages" of a disarmament program.

EDEN REJECTS BULGANIN PLEA FOR ARMS CUT

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

LONDON, July 10—Prime Minister Eden placed Britain in line with the United States and the other western powers yesterday in rejecting a disarmament plea by the Soviet Premier Bulganin.

Bulganin wrote a personal letter dated June 6 to Eden, as well as to President Eisenhower and other heads of western governments asking them to follow the Soviet lead in reducing their armed forces.

The British Phime Minister said in his delayed reply that Britain already had made substantial reductions in its armed forces.

"My own feeling is that unilateral reductions of this kind are helpful," Eden said. "I do not think, however, that they are, of themselves, sufficient if international confidence and security are to develop as we wish.

"To promote such confidence it is essential that disarmament should take place under an international agreement which provided for effective control and inspection and for adequate measures for protection against surprise attack."

In his note, Bulganin said the disarmament talks in the United Nations could not be expected to bring concrete results in the near future. Eden, on his part, asserted that these talks were "necessary to reach an agreement which will ensure the security of all by means of an adequate system of international control."

The Soviet Premier's note suggested that Britain and the United States reduce their forces in Germany. In his reply Eden said:

"It does not seem to me to be practical to consider in isolation your suggestions so far as they concern Germany. I am anxious to find means of reducing armed forces and armaments. But to bring about a real detente (relaxation of tension) in Europe, it is also necessary that the peoples of Western Europe should feel that the existing guarantees for their security are being retained."

BOARD RESUMES ITS HEARINGS ON DOWNTOWN AUTO PARKING BILLS

Aldermen Are Told Some Municipal Garages in Other Cities Are Successful Financially.

Some municipal parking garages in other cities are successful financially, the zoning committee of the Board of Aldermen was told today as it continued hearings on pending measures for condemnation of two downtown sites for construction of garages here.

Sites under consideration are between Eighth and Ninth streets, Delmar boulevard and Lucas avenue, and Broadway and Sixth, Chestnut and Pine streets.

Jack W. Hart, vice president of Ramp Bldg., Inc., an engineering consultant firm engaged by the Off-Street Parking Commission, said that the two sites were selected by the commission from a list of five and resubmitted to the engineering firm.

Hart continued that similar off-street parking facilities in other cities in which his firm was concerned had operated without financial difficulty. Two municipal parking garages in Pittsburgh, he said, are returning revenues of 10 or 15 per cent above previous estimates. Two others have been added.

William A. Semsrott, representing the Associated Retailers, told committee members that while a proposed fee of $1.25 for six hours parking appeared to be high, it might be compensated for by "attractiveness, acceptability, and desirability" of the sites.

Opposition to the proposals was advanced by Otto Dingeldein, representing the Small Business Council, which includes about 95 small concerns in the downtown area. Dingeldein expressed the opinion that real estate might be developed more favorably under other proposals and that establishment of the parking facilities would remove property from the tax rolls. He suggested that underground parking facilities might be created.

Donald Gunn, president of the Board of Aldermen, and ex officio head of the zoning committee, conducted most of the interrogation, which followed public hearings.

BOY, 12, SHOT BY FRIEND AT PLAY WITH REVOLVER

Robert Upchurch, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Upchurch, 5701 Highland avenue, was accidentally shot and seriously wounded today while playing with a .45-caliber revolver with a friend. The bullet entered the right side of the boy's chest.

The shooting occured in a second-floor bedroom at the home of Robert's friend, James Skiles, 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney S. Skiles, 5831 Lotus avenue.

The Skiles boy told police he had taken the revolver owned by his older brother, Sidney Jr., from a cabinet in the room and was playing with it. He said the boys thought the weapon was unloaded. When the revolver was discharged, the Skiles boy told police, he was holding the butt and Robert was holding the barrel.

KARST SAYS ADMINISTRATION IS HURTING SMALL BUSINESS

The Republican Administration is helping big businesses and hurting small businesses, Raymond W. Karst, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress, told the Twenty-third Ward Democratic Club in a talk last night.

"In three years of G.O.P. rule the biggest businesses in this country have increased their share of all industrial assets from 51 to 57 per cent," Karst asserted.

Karst said the Small Business Administration, created by the present government to aid small businesses, failed to approve a single small business loan in its first four months of life.

Bissell Hills, Without Gas, Has Barbecue 'Coming Out Our Ears'

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

MRS. CLIFFORD LAMBERT, 9914 Hayward drive, Bellefontaine Neighbors, taking milk for her 1-year-old son, DENNIS, from a borrowed soft drink cooler which the family has used to keep its food cold since gas service was interrupted by strike.

Cooking on Outdoor Fireplaces and Hot Plates Becoming Routine for 250 Families.

Cold baths and cooking on hot plates and outdoor fireplaces were becoming routine in the daily living of 250 families in the Bissell Hills subdivision in north St. Louis county as they began their tenth consecutive day today without gas.

"We've gotten so tired of barbecue that it's coming out our ears," Mrs. Clifford Lambert, 9914 Hayward drive, Bellefontaine Neighbors, remarked. In self defense, her husband bought an electric frying pan.

The Lamberts, who have a 1-year-old son, are feeling the interruption in gas service more than many other affected families becase they have a gas clothes drier and refrigerator as well as a gas stove and water heater.

They are getting by with a borrowed soft drink cooler, a borrowed clothesline and a popcorn popper. Vegetables turn out just fine in a popcorn popper, Mrs. Lambert reported.

Until the recent cool spell, Mr. and Mrs. Roger H. Loudon, 9937 Hayward, solved the hot bath problem for their children, 9 and 3, by plopping them into a wading pool after the water was heated in the afternoon sun.

Mrs. John H. Kleine, 9948 Calumet drive, put dry ice in her two gas refrigerators the first few days after service was discontinued but soon found that "everything tasted like dry ice, including the eggs." She and her husband take cold baths, Mrs. Kleine reported, "in about one inch of water."

Electrical appliances and the homes of relatives were reported growing steadily in popularity, and business at nearby laundromats has been picking up daily.

UNION MEETING INTERRUPTS AIRPORT TAXICAB SERVICE

Taxicab service from the new terminal building at Lambert-St. Louis Field was interrupted for nearly two hours yesterday afternoon when drivers left their stand to attend a meeting of Taxicab Drivers, of the Teamsters' Union, at the United Auto Workers hall in Robertson. Arthur K. Muchmore, assistant airport manager, reported.

Muchmore said drivers for all five cab firms authorized to operate at the airport were gone from 1 to 2:50 p.m. The only cab service available during that time was provided by vehicles that had brought passengers to the airport and then picked up persons leaving the terminal. There was a similar interruption in service three weeks ago, Muchmore said.

A union spokesman said the men met to ratify contract proposals for forthcoming negotiations with the companies. Two meetings were held in an effort to avoid an interruption of service but some drivers, working when both were scheduled, had to cease driving in order to attend, he said.

WOMAN FIRES 6 WILD SHOTS IN CIVIL COURTS BUILDING

About 30 persons on the first floor of the Civil Courts building ran for cover today when a woman fired six wild shots from a pistol at Mrs. Augusta Burks, an elevator operator. No one was struck.

Mrs. Blanche Edwards, elevator started, said the woman, described as about 30 years old, fired three shots in the lobby. Then Mrs. Burks, who lives at 4624 Ashland avenue, ran into the circuit clerk's office and ducked under a desk.

The woman followed and fired three more shots, narrowly missing some of the 20 office employes. She then ran out of the office and fled through the Twelfth street door of the building, falling once on the steps. Mrs. Burks said the woman had been making incoherent charges against her in the last two months. Both Mrs. Burks and her assailant are Negroes.

BOARD'S DECISION ON POLICE PAY-OFF EXPECTED MONDAY

A decision on what disciplinary action to take against some officers named in the police pay-off investigation is expected next Monday, I. A. Long, president of the Board of Police Commissioners, said yesterday.

The additional week is needed, Long said, for a thorough study of reports made to the board by Police Inspector James F. Thompson. At its meeting yesterday, the board considered reports on individual officers named in the inquiry.

Long refused to comment on any phase of Thompson's report or whether any general shakeup in police assignments is contemplated. No witnesses were heard at yesterday's meeting and Long said no more were to be called.

BELLEVILLE MARINE'S BODY RECOVERED NEAR HONOLULU

The body of Marine Lt. George H. VanGordon, son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. VanGordon of Belleville, was recovered yesterday from the wreckage of a twin-engine training plane which crashed into a mountain near Honolulu last Thursday, killing all four persons aboard, it was reported today.

The crash occurred in such a remote area that it took Navy rescue crews almost two days to reach the plane. Lt. VanGordon, 25 years old, was a reservist in a ground unit.

His wife and 2-year-old daughter live in Huntington, W.Va., where he attended college. The body will be returned to Belleville for burial.

3 MENTIONED AS PROSPECTS FOR HULEN POST

Howard Elliott, Judges LaDriere and Weber Considered — Possibility of Delay.

Howard Elliott of Ladue, the 1952 Republican candidate for Governor, and two Republican circuit judges were being mentioned in G.O.P. circles here today as possible candidates for appointment as United States district judge to succeed the late Rubey M. Hulen.

Those under consideration, in addition to Elliott, are Circuit Judges Raymond E. LaDriere of Clayton and Randolph H. Weber of Poplar Bluff.

Under the usual course, a nomination to fill the vacancy would be made by President Eisenhower, in line with the recommendation of Missouri Republican leaders. However, since both Missouri United States senators are Democrats, there is a possibility that the Senate confirmation of the person nominated by the President may be held up until after the Nov. 6 general election.

Chance for Democrat.

The election of a Democratic President in November would open the way for appointment of a Democrat instead of a Republican to the federal bench here, if confirmation of an Eisenhower nomination is delayed. The last Republican to serve as a federal judge in St. Louis was Charles B. Davis, who died in 1943.

Many St. Louis area Republicans are expected to back Elliott for the appointment. A 52-year-old attorney, Elliott served three terms as Speaker of the Missouri House. He participated actively in the recent efforts to restore Republican party harmony in Missouri.

LaDriere, 64 years old, has served as a circuit judge in St. Louis county since 1943. He was one of several persons considered recently for appointment to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Weber, 46, has strong backing for the federal bench appointment from outstate Republicans, particularly those in the southern part of the eastern district of Missouri. He has been a circuit judge since 1942.

Other lawyers are likely to be recommended for the appointment by party and bar groups. Elroy W. Bromwich, newly elected Republican national committeeman for Missouri, said he will wait until all persons have been proposed, and then confer with G.O.P. leaders of eastern Missouri before making his recommendation.

Judge Hulen's Funeral.

Funeral services for Judge Hulen, who died Saturday of a gunshot wound in the head, were held yesterday at the Lupton undertaking establishment, 7233 Delmar boulevard, University City. The body was cremated.

About 300 persons attended the 25-minute service, conducted by the Rev. Dr. J. Layton Mauze Jr., pastor of Central Presbyterian Church. Forest M. Hemke paid tribute Judge Hulen in a talk. He noted that the judge conducted himself on the bench "with an even disposition and with skill and honesty," and always had a deep concern for the rights of clients.

A corner's jury returned an open verdict yesterday, reporting after hearing several witnesses that it could not determine whether Judge Hulen's death was accidental.

STATE SUPREME COURT UPHOLDS DEATH FOR TWO

By the Post-Dispatch Jefferson City Correspondent.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 10 —Rollie Laster, St. Joseph convict who participated in the 1954 Missouri state prison riot, and Robert Burnett, condemned for the holdup murder of a St. Louis grocer, must die in the penitentiary's lethal gas chamber here Aug. 24, the Missouri Supreme Court ruled late yesterday.

Decisions holding that there were no reversible errors in the trials of Laster and Burnett were concurred in by all seven judges of the court en banc.

Laster, 25 years old, was one of seven convicts charged with the murder of Walter Lee Donnell, St. Louis convict, in the disastrous prison riot Sept. 22, 1954. The state charged they forced their way through three steel gates to stab and beat Donnell to death in a "death row" cell.

Burnett, 21, a Negro, was found guilty of the first degree murder of Abe Levitt in Levitt's store at the southwest corner of Maffitt and Newsted avenues in St. Louis Dec. 20, 1954. He was tried in the court of Circuit Judge William S. Connor April 13, 1955.

May Die Together.

Prison officials last night said no decision has been reached whether the two men would be executed simultaneously in the gas chamber, which contains two seats for condemned persons.

Laster was found guilty and given the death penalty in Cole county circuit court here Jan. 27, 1955. He was the first of seven convicts to go to trial. The other six received life sentences in separate trials. Each has appealed to the Supreme Court.

The prison murder victim, Donnell, serving a robbery sentence, had been placed in "death row" for safety after other prison inmates suspected him of being an informer.

Testimony, and a statement by Laster which he later repudiated, placed Laster in the group which killed Donnell with knives and a sledge hammer. The convicts failed in an attempt to kill James Creighton, also held in a cell adjoining Donnell's "for safekeeping."

Judge Henry I. Eager wrote the opinion adopted by the court in the case of Laster.

Defense Contentions.

The opinion overruled defense contentions Laster's admission was not voluntary and therefore not admissible in evidence, that Prosecuting Attorney James T. Riley of Cole County engaged in inflammatory argument before the trial jury, and that Circuit Judge Sam C. Blair should have reduced the death sentence to life imprisonment.

Four convicts were killed in the September 1954 riot, 30 others were shot or injured and four prison guards were injured.

An opinion by Judge S. P. Dalton noted that Burnett testifying in his own behalf in his trial, said Levitt was shot in a struggle with Burnett after the latter told the victim it was a holdup. No money was obtained, it was said.

There were no trial errors and "the record clearly shows a homicide in the perpetration of an attempted robbery," Judge Dalton said.

A companion in the attempted robbery, Sterling Quinn, also a Negro, pleaded guilty before Circuit Judge James E. Laughlin in St. Louis and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

In another decision yesterday, the Supreme Court denied a motion by the Attorney General's department for a rehearing on its decision last June 11, setting aside the murder conviction of Albert L. Paglino of St. Louis county and ordering a new trial for him.

Paglino was convicted in St. Louis county circuit court last year in the alleged arson murder of a man who was identified and buried as Paglino. The Supreme Court's June decision set aside the conviction and a jury sentence of life imprisonment, on grounds of insufficient evidence.

Two Who Telephoned False Tip On Boy's Kidnaping Denied Bail

Jobless Men Charged With Extortion Attempt—Mother at Hearing—No Trace of Baby.

WESTBURY, N.Y., July 10 (AP)—Two men face up to 25 years in prison if convicted of tormenting Mrs. Beatrice Weinberger with a false claim they held her kidnaped baby boy.

The two, both unemployed, were arraigned today.

Mrs. Weinberger appeared in court to make a formal complaint against the men, who were ordered held without bail for an appearance in a Queens felony court next Monday on charges of attempted extortion and giving false information in a kidnaping.

Meanwhile, there was no trace of the 5-week-old Peter Weinberger or any solid evidence he is still alive. The blue-eyed baby was snatched from his carriage in the patio of the Weinberger home here last Wednesday.

Last night police sent out a 13-state alarm asking that doctors, hospitals, nurseries and adoption agencies be alerted to look out for the baby. The alarm described his feeding formula, which included five drops of Dozex, a vitamin B-12 compound.

Inspector Stuyvesant Pinnell of the Nassau county police said again today that a church or synagogue would be the best medium to deal through from the kidnaper's standpoint.

Churches and synagogues in a large section of Long Island have been keeping their doors open night and day in hope the kidnaper might leave the infant in one of them with assurance of not being caught.

Pinnell, whose advice to the kidnaper was much the same as he gave last Friday, said he would "not be a party to any compromise or deal" in payment of ransom money.

He said the kidnaper would be running a risk in collecting ransom money, whereas he would not run a risk in depositing the child in a church or synagogue.

The FBI plans to enter the case in force tomorrow—one week after the kidnaping. Under the Lindbergh law, the FBI can move into a kidnaping case after seven days or after the victim has been transported across state lines.

Arrested in yesterday's hoax were Robert F. Giebler, 27-year-old longshoreman and Gordon T. Rowell, 24, railroad clerk. Both are married and Giebler has three children.

Plotted in Bar.

Police said the two hatched the hoax in a Queens bar Sunday night.

The two allegedly made four telephone calls to the Weinberger home Sunday night and early yesterday. They told Mrs. Weinberger she would find her infant son in a Queens church if she paid the $5000 ransom, police said.

Twice the 32-year-old mother took $5000 and drove off from her home in desperate hope of embracing her baby again.

MAN GETS 6-MONTH TERM FOR DESTROYING PROPERTY

Robert Lee Drye, of the 1400 block of Biddle street, was sentenced to six months in the City Workhouse yesterday on a plea of guilty to a charge of malicious destruction of property.

Police testified in the court of Judge Louis Comerford that they arrested Drye, a Negro, June 14, when they saw him coming from a vacant building in the 1900 block of North Market street with 150 pounds of pipe.

When arrested he said this was the fifth time he had entered the building to remove pipe with an ax, police declared. A representative of the real estate company owning the building said total damage amounted to $2000.

TWO FINED FOR SPEEDING

Robert L. Fox, 19 years old, of the 8800 block of Blewett avenue, Jennings, was fined $25 and Richard L. Meyers, 25, of the 3100 block of Allen avenue, was fined $20 last night in Bel-Ridge police court when they pleaded guilty to charges of careless and reckless driving by speeding.

They were arrested June 10 at Natural Bridge and Brown roads by Deputy Marshal Jerome Pragacz of Bel-Ridge after a two-mile chase. Pragacz reported the two were racing their automobiles side-by-side at speeds up to 80 miles an hour.

SCOVEL RICHARDSON OK'D

Renomination of Scovel Richardson, former St. Louisan, for a new six-year term on the Federal Parole Board was approved yesterday by the Senate Judiciary Committee. The proposal now will go to the Senate for confirmation.

Richardson, former dean of the Lincoln University Law School at St. Louis, was named to the board in August 1953, and was sworn in as its chairman in September. He is the first Negro to serve on the board.

STRIKERS VOTE HALT IN A. O. SMITH TALKS

To Break Off Negotiations Until Six Who Were Jailed Are Freed.

About 1300 union boilermakers employed at the struck Granite City plant of the A. O. Smith Corp. voted today to break off all negotiations with the company until six boilermakers jailed for violating an anti-picketing injunction are freed.

A spokesman said Attorney Edward D. Groshong of East Alton had been instructed to cease discussions immediately with company representatives. Members of the union, Local 575, also voted to remain away from work until seniority rights of all members have been restored.

The six men were sentenced July 6 by Circuit Judge Quinten Spivey at Edwardsville for violating provisions of his order restraining them from mass picketing. All were given six-month terms but the sentences were modified.

Thomas Gibson and Clarence Mayes were ordered to serve 20 days and the other four, Conrad Bauer, William Crowder, Leonard LaBarge and Magnus Leisner, 10 days. All must report to the Madison county probation officer once a month for six months.

Most of the 1500 boilermakers employed by the Smith Corp., which manufactures automobile frames for General Motors Corp., have been away from their jobs since June 16 because of a strike of 22 machinists. Some followed international leaders and went back to work, but the back-to-work movement faltered when the majority decided against it.

The strike appeared to have been settled when the machinists agreed to a new contract offer last week. But the boilermakers then set up their own picket line in protest against the firing of 9 men who led the group which honored the machinists' pickets.

MILITARY BUILDING VOTED

WASHINGTON, July 10 (AP) —The Senate passed compromise legislation last night to authorize a $2,138,886,000 program of military construction in the United States and at bases abroad.

The conference report, approved earlier in the day by the House, now goes to President Eisenhower for his signature. The legislation carries out the program of the Air Force for dispersal of its B-52 bases.

DECISION TO RUN AGAIN REVEALED BY EISENHOWER

But once the briefing on congressional matters was finished, a reporter asked Knowland if there had been any discussion of the President's second term intentions.

"There was," Knowland replied promptly.

Obviously it had been determined in a meeting between the Republican leaders and Hagerty beforehand just what the Senate leader was going to say.

He said it quickly.

"The President," he said, "was in excellent spirits and in good humor."

President Opened Subject.

Knowland said Mr. Eisenhower himself brought up the second term question in the sense that the President said he would wage a vigorous campaign this fall.

He went on to say that Mr. Eisenhower told the group he was "in better shape than before" his intestinal operation.

Answering questions, Knowland said the second term question "just came up naturally" in the middle of the discussion, which apparently centered around the foreign aid legislation now before Congress.

Sitting in a semicircle around a green felt-covered desk used by Knowland—and earlier by the President—were the other congressional leaders who had attended the session. They were House Republican Leader Joseph Martin, Massachusetts; Senators Styles Bridges, New Hampshire, and Leverett Saltonstall, Massachusetts, and Representatives Charles A. Halleck, Indiana; Leo E. Allen, Illinois, and Leslie Arends, Illinois.

Knowland said Mr. Eisenhower "made it very clear" that in addition to trying to get current foreign aid appropriations ot the $4,050,000,000 ceiling authorized by a Senate-House conference, he would campaign this fall for a continued foreign aid program.

The Senate leader said the authorization figure, though less than the Administration recommended, is satisfactory to the President.

"That's all, gentlemen," Knowland said finally after the briefing—and the unexpected political disclosure were completed.

The score of men and women correspondents broke for the door.

Reporters for the three wire services jumped into the car of a Gettysburg college professor, which was nearer than their own. The professor drove them back to the press center some four blocks away almost before he knew what news he was carrying.

No Previous Hint.

During the three weeks the President spent in Walter Reed Hospital recuperating from his major abdominal operation he dropped not a single public hint as to what his political course would be as a result of his illness. Aids insisted that he did not discuss the matter with any Government official who visited him in the hospital.

Mr. Eisenhower's silence had served to underscore what he himself had told a news conference March 7, just a week after he announced his second term intentions.

At the March meeting the President was asked what he would do if he found out before the Republican nominating convention "that your physical condition was below the par you had expected." Mr. Eisenhower replied:

"I have said, unless I felt absolutely up to the performance of the duties of the President, the second that I didn't, I would no longer be there in the job, or I wouldn't be available for the job."

Following up on that, another reporter remarked:

"Mr. President, . . . you seem to be saying if at any time you feel that your health is not up to carrying the burden of the Presidency, you will withdraw from the race. Is that correct?"

"Well now," Mr. Eisenhower replied with a smile, "don't hold me down if I get a week's case of the flu or something else. . . . I am talking about my general, let's say, organic fitness for the job, as I see it, and that means carrying a burden of hard work right on through the year and through the months.

"Now, any time I believe that has failed to the point of inability to perform the job properly, then that goes before the American people instantly."

Previous Announcement.

In making his announcement for a second term Feb. 29, Mr. Eisenhower said he was "as well as before" his heart attack occurred.

"As of this moment," he declared, "there is not the slightest doubt that I can perform as well s I ever have, all of the important duties of the presidency. . . . So far as I am concerned, I am confident that I can carry them indefinitely."

He said then, too, that "some of my medical advisers believe that adverse effects on my health will be less in the presidency than in any other position" because "they believe . . . the watchful care that doctors can and do exercise over a President" means that a Chief Executive "normally runs less risk of physical difficulty than do other citizens."

The meeting with the leaders was another step toward the full resumption of his presidential responsibilities.

Mr. Eisenhower arrived at a temporary office set up in Glatfelter Hall on the Gettysburg College campus at 9:30 a.m.

He went immediately into a conference with Republican leaders who flew here from Washington.

The President wore a tan tweed sport jacket, tan slacks, a tan shirt and a green speckled tie. As he walked up the six steps into the office, he took hold of a hand rail and climbed slowly and cautiously.

About 50 students and others saw the President arrive, in addition to the usual throng of reporters and photographers.

STEVENSON GLAD PRESIDENT FEELS HE IS ABLE TO RUN

appeared to be in exceptionally good spirits.

"Now we are ready to go into the campaign," commented House Republican leader Joseph Martin of Massachusetts. "The President is ready to do whatever is necessary in the way of campaigning to win the election. "He is in spiendid physical condition now and told us that he feels stronger than ever and is in better shape than he was before his recent operation."

Earlier at Gettysburg, Martin had said of Mr. Eisenhower's decision:

"I think it's wonderful. It means that the Republican party will have a landslide victory in November."

'Ready for Campaign.'

Knowland said "there was never any doubt in my mind that the President would run again. He is ready for the campaign and so are we. Now we can go ahead."

Republican Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire said "the President appeared very determined and even vigorous and enthusiastic over the prospects of plunging into the campaign. He looks fine. Naturally we are very pleased and enthusiastic, to get the word that he will be a candidate again."

Republican Representative Charles A. Halleck of Indiana said "the President's health appears to be better than ever and we are happy that he is going to run again."

In Albany, N.Y., Gov. Averell Harriman commented: "Mr. Eisenhower announced last February that he was a candidate and I have assumed that his recent illness would not affect that decision."

By the United Press.

Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem.), Tennessee, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, told a reporter:

"I assumed that he would be the candidate. I am glad he feels able to run. I hope he and Mrs. Eisenhower reached this decision without letting a lot of political pressure play a part."

Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson, the Texas favorite son candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said:

"I am happy the President feels his health is such that he is up to an arduous campaign It will be an arduous campaign."

Johnson said he had talked with the President by telephone this morning and that Mr. Eisenhower "told me he felt good." Johnson suffered a heart attack last summer.

'Not Surprised . . . Pleased.'

Senator Ralph E. Flanders (Rep.), Vermont—"I am not shocked. I am not surprised. I am pleased."

Senator Margaret Chase Smith (Rep.), Maine—"I thought he made that announcement very clear some months ago."

Representative Clarence J. Brown (Rep.), Ohio—"It's good news, but I am not surprised. It means we will have an Eisenhower-Nixon ticket again and that we will win."

Representative Frank W. Boykin (Dem.), Alabama—"We are all very thankful that the President has regained his health. He's a great and good American."

Representative Michael J. Kirwan (Dem.), Ohio., chairman of the Democratic congressional campaign committee—"I still say that no matter whom they run, we will win the presidency, the Senate, and the House."

INTERPRETATIONS OF PARTIES VARY

Announcement of the President's intention to run again came as no surprise to Missouri political leaders, but Republicans and Democrats differed sharply on the implications of the decision.

Republicans said it signifies that the President is physically able to serve a second term. The Democrats contended it means that the question of a "part-time" President will be a major campaign issue.

"This is wonderful news—the best for Missouri Republicans in the last four of five days," Elroy W. Bromwich, new G.O.P. national committeeman for Missouri declared.

"His second operation cleared things up and he will be able to carry on better than ever. There is no question but that he will be re-elected."

Mark R. Holloran, Missouri's Democratic national commiteeman, said Mr. Eisenhower's decision to run means that the "Democrats will surely win this year."

He said the "desperation" of the Republican party for a presidential candidate has forced Mr. Eisenhower to run, despite his two serious illnesses within a year.

"I think all Democrats will welcome this Republican opposition," he said. "I do not feel the country is ready for the luxury of a part-time President and several unelected assistant presidents.

"In serious times such as these, strong and virulent leadership is needed of the type that only the Democratic party can offer."

Maurice E. Mendle, whose appointment as chairman of the Missouri Citizens-for-Eisenhower Committee stirred up an intra-party row, said he always felt the President would run again if his health permitted.

"The President is a man of integrity, who would not have taken the step unless he had every assurance that he could—not only from his doctors but from his own conscience," Mendle added.

John J. Dwyer, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, agreed with Holloran that the issue of a part-time President will be an important one in the coming campaign. Dwyer said he was not surprised by the President's decision, saying: "The Republicans were panicky for a candidate."

Charles P. McBride, chairman of the Republican city committee, declared the announcement was "great news."

He said he admired the President's "honesty and candor, and I trust his judgment expliictly, as do all Americans." With Mr. Eisenhower heading the ticket, the Republicans "will go forward to a sweeping victory in Missouri next November," he said.

MISSOURI COURT RULES OUT CLAIM ON THOLOZAN ESTATE

The Missouri Supreme Court yesterday ruled that Miss Eulalie Phillips of St. Louis, who died in 1950 at the age of 90, had full control of real estate valued at more than $123,000 which was part of an estate left by Mrs. Adele Tholozan, member of a pioneer St. Louis family, who died in 1877.

In interpreting the hand-written Tholozan will to mean that Miss Phillips had title to the property, the court decided against claims of Robert A. Hereford, 423 Church street, Ferguson, and other heirs who contended that the property in question should have reverted to them on Miss Phillips' death.

Properties involved were described as a small building at 3536 Olive street, a retail store at 819 Locust street and a structure at 612 Walnut street. Hereford, who is public relations director of St. Louis Institute of Music, said he did not know whether any further legal action would be taken by descendants of the Tholozan family.

Aid Cut Backer Doubts House Will Rise Despite Eisenhower Plea

Lower Chamber Votes Tomorrow on 1.3 Billion Slash—Martin Expects Senate 'to Correct Errors.'

WASHINGTON, July 10 (AP) —The sponsor of a heavily-cut foreign aid money bill said today he does not expect the House to increase its amount despite an appeal from President Eisenhower for a "substantial" restoration of funds.

Representative Passman (Dem.) of Louisiana referred to scheduled House action tomorrow on the $3,600,000,000 foreign aid measure approved by the House Appropriations Committee. The bill is some $1,300,000,000 below Mr. Eisenhower's request.

"I do not anticipate an increase" by the House, Passman told a reporter, adding that if the Senate later votes for a bigger amount he will not "capitulate" in his efforts to keep a Senate-House compromise close to the lower figure.

President's Protest.

The House Republican leader, Representative Martin of Massachusettes handed to the Senate yesterday responsibility for any move to add funds to the bill. He announced at the start of debate that the House G.O.P. leadership would make no concerted floor effort to restore money although, he said "we believe the President is right" in protesting against the cut.

The President's appeal, made yesterday from his farm at Gettysburg, Pa., was repeated today in a listing of legislative measures he hopes Congress will enact before adjournment.

Both the House and the Senate yesterday passed by voice votes a compromise four billion dollar foreign aid authorization bill.

The House then went on to debate the separate appropriation bill, but put it on the shelf until tomorrow when leaders could muster only 57 of the 100 members required on the floor to transact business.

In the one and one-half hours of debate yesterday, Martin said he expects the Senate will "exercise better judgment" and "correct the errors that we made here" by the foreign aid cut.

"It makes no sense at this time, when the Soviet empire looks like it might be tottering or at least in serious trouble, to hold back on the defense of our country," Martin told the House. "That's exactly what this bill would do.

Needed for Security.

"My friends, I ask you with all seriousness, can we afford to cut the amount below what he (Mr. Eisenhower) says is necessary for the security of this nation?"

Passman argued with equal vigor for the reduction made by the Appropriations Committee on the basis of a recommendation from a subcommittee he heads.

As for the Senate correcting House "errors," Passman told his colleagues, the House itself has responsibility for looking after national security and it is composed of "435 of the finest Americans you have in this country."

He added that even "10 of the healthiest men in America" could not be doing all that Mr. Eisenhower is credited by aids with doing, and said Congressmen should realize presidential requests are not all made by Mr. Eisenhower himself but frequently by others in his name.

Passman noted in an interview some $6,800,000,000 remains in funds unspent from previous years' foreign aid appropriations. "We could have gone through this year without one dime and it would have never hurt the program," he said.

Carryover Funds.

As the House committee figures it, Mr. Eisenhower's total appropriation request for the fiscal year amounted to $5,071,875,000 — $4,859,975,000 plus $211,900,000 in requested reappropriation of carryover funds that would otherwise have reverted to the Treasury July 1.

The committee cropped the total to $3,665,920,000, a reduction of $1,405,955,000. Most of the slash was $1,236,100,000 cut from $3,166,600,000 Mr. Eisenhower sought for military aid to free world countries.

The authorization bill passed yesterday involved a somewhat different set of figures. However, both measures can be figured in terms of cuts—the authorization $744,900,000 below Mr. Eisenhower's request, the appropriation nearly twice that much.

Commenting on the chances of the Senate boosting the appropriation figure, Senator Mansfield (Dem.), Montana, indicated they would be improved if the Administration told Congress more about what was being done with the money. He urged that "all officers and employes of the administering agencies which will spend this money will be directed by him to answer questions of congressional committees having jurisdiction over the appropriation and expenditure of the sums."

MO. PAC. REQUESTS FARE INCREASE ON COMMUTER TRAIN

The Missouri Pacific railroad today asked the Public Service Commission for authority to increase commuter fares on its "Pacific local" between Kirkwood and Union Station.

The proposed increases range from five to 15 cents. The minimum fare, between Union Station and the Tower Grove station, would be increased from 15 to 25 cents. The maximum, for the trip to Kirkwood, would be raised from 25 to 40 cents. Fares west of Kirkwood would be unchanged.

The company said it has been sustaining a substantial net deficit on its commuter service. Fares, which have not been increased for some years, would be brought to about the same level as those now charged on Public Service Co. express busses serving the same area, the application said.

ASKS HIGH COURT TO BLOCK DAM IN HELL'S CANYON

Attorney for Public Power Groups Seeks Stay on Idaho Power Co. License.

WASHINGTON, July 10 (AP) —The Supreme Court was asked today to stop the construction of a private power dam in the Hell's canyon stretch of the Snake river where a federal dam has been proposed.

Public power groups filed an application asking the Supreme Court to stay a Federal Power Commission order granting a construction license to the Idaho Power Co.

The company plans to build three dams in the river bordering Idaho and Oregon which would flood the site of the proposed federal Hell's canyon dam.

Evelyn Cooper, attorney for the National Hell's Canyon Association and other groups advocating the federal project, asked the court to hear oral arguments on her application. She said the court of appeals has been asked to reverse the Power Commission action.

Idaho Power already is building one of the licensed dams, Brownlee, and its completion before the appeals cour acts and the case reaches the Supreme Court would "threaten to impair the jurisdiction of the court, Mrs. Cooper said.

She said the case would be taken to the Supreme Court either by her clients of by the Federal Power Commission after the court of appeals acts, provided Congress does not in the meantime authorize construction of the federal dam.

Authorization by Congress, she said, would nullify Idaho Power's license.

The Senate next week is expected to debate a Hell's Canyan dam bill. The House also may take up a similar measure this session.

The Federal Power Commission and the court of appeals both have turned down Mrs. Cooper's request for a stay, similar to the one made today.

DEMOCRATS PICK GOV. CLEMENT AS PARTY KEYNOTER

would discuss the desegregation issue "in a way that is not offensive to anyone."

Butler said that former President Truman has been slated as "a major speaker" to address the convention after nominees for President and Vice President have been chosen, probably Thursday evening, Aug. 16.

The selection of Clement met with approval among the party's presidential aspirants. Stevenson said he was "very glad to hear" of the choice and predicted he would be a "forceful spokesman for the Democratic party."

Senator Estes Kefauver, a fellow Tennesseean and presidential hopeful, termed the selection as an honor for Clement. Kefauver said it in no way would affect his determination to win the nomination. Kefauver and Clement are not considered to be politically close. Clement had insisted on heading an unpledged delegation to the national convention, thereby preventing Kefauver from possible home state delegate support.

Senator Stuart Symington, Missouri's "favorite son" candidate, termed the selection of Clement as "great."

Gov. Averell Harriman of New York sent this telegram to Clement: "I send you my warm congratulations. You will be a fine and effective keynoter."

Clement's familiarity with the farm problem, Butler said, was one point on which he was chosen. Mention of the farm problem underscored strong efforts by both Republicans and Democrats to obtain the farm vote.

Stevenson and Harriman have made recent grass-roots campaign tours in the farm belt.

The Republicans opened an agriculture campaign office yesterday in Chicago, headed by former Gov. Dan Thornton of Colorado. Thornton said he will seek to organize individual ranchers and farmers to support the Administration, particularly on the basis of the recently adopted soil bank program.

HOUSE OF LORDS REJECTS BILL TO OUTLAW HANGING

LONDON, July 10 (UP)—The House of Lords tonight rejected a bill to outlaw hanging in Britain. It voted 238 to 95 against the bill after two days of hot debate.

The vote sent the bill back to the House of Commons, which had passed it two weeks ago.

inquiring about tax payments made by the gang boss.

Stoddart described Wortman as "the biggest hoodlum of the St. Louis area, who has been flouting the law for some time."

Federal authorities in East St. Louis pointed out that the grand jury in Springfield had no jurisdiction for criminal action against Wortman for an assault occurring in East St. Louis, which is in the Eastern District.

Wortman's only criminal conviction was for assaulting a prohibition agent in 1933. Sentenced to 10 years in prison, he served most of the term in Alcatraz Penietentiary and was released in 1941. It was following his release that he became a "big shot" in the gang world, making important connections with the old Capone syndicate of Chicago.

Federal grand juries here and at East St. Louis have investigated Wortman's tax returns in the past two years. He was jailed for 41 days in 1954 by United States District Judge George H. Moore for refusal to tell a grand jury where he lived. He was released when he agreed to divulge this information.

High-stake dice games have been operated in recent years by Wortman at the elaborate Club Prevue and at the Red Rooster tavern, both on U. S. Highway 40, near the Fairmount Park race track. Illinois state police moved into the county when local authorities failed to act against the violations, and conducted raids.

Buick SPECIAL 6-Passenger 4-Door Riviera

It's only July— so why miss the fun?

In all truth—when would be a better time to buy your new Buick than right now?

When else could you drive home a better bargain—with your present car now worth more than it ever will be again—and while Buick prices are within easier reach of more people than ever before?

And when else would you get more good out of it all? When else will there be better weather—more hours in the day—more yen for going—more places to go—more fun on tap—more sports in season?

So you get the most good, and the most car right now in a new Buick . . .

Because the new Buick you boss today is far and away the best Buick yet . . .

Because simply seeing this Buick beauty standing before your door is enough to spark your spirits . . .

Because, eager as a colt in clover, it can barely wait for key and throttle to turn loose the boundless power of its big 322-cubic-inch V8 engine that revels in running . . .

Because it spices every moving moment with sweet-riding joy that makes even the simplest errand an enjoyable excursion . . .

And because you relax in the wide open spaces of its rich interior—while Variable Pitch Dynaflow* performs its pace-making magic with a smoothness matched nowhere else on wheels.

So why waste time keeping a car that becomes more humdrum and less valuable every day?

Come let the Buick you could be driving show you what wonderful sense it makes to buy in July.

Come now—the model that matches your ideas and dollars may be ready for delivery this very week—and at a whale of a fine deal too good to pass up.

*New Advanced Variable Pitch Dynaflow is the only Dynaflow Buick builds today. It is standard on Roadmaster, Super and Century — optional at modest extra cost on the Special.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST CBS TV STATION HERE

By a Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 10—A recommendation by a Federal Communications Commission hearing examiner that the Columbia Broadcasting System be permitted to operate a television station on Channel 11 at St. Louis was sharply criticized yesterday by other competitors for the channel. CBS was recommended for the Channel Sept. 6, 1955, by Examiner Thomas F. Donahue.

Final arguments by the applicants were heard by the FCC. It is expected that a decision will be made in about four months.

Paul M. Segal, attorney for St. Louis Telecast Inc., stressed the "bigness" of CBS and asserted that the network in attempting to spread what he termed its dominance in the industry is "asking for indictment under the anti-trust laws."

Bernard Koteen, representing 220 Television Inc., also said that CBS "must lose in view of its domination" in the broadcasting field. He said it already controls more than half of the broadcasting time of 50 radio stations and two television stations.

Vernon L. Williamson, attorney for Broadcast House, said his client was the only one of the applicants proposing to construct its broadcasting facilities in the eastern half of the channel's service area. He said Broadcast House would build in East St. Louis and would place special emphasis on the needs of East St. Louis and southwestern Illinois, which now get no consideration, he said from stations operating on the Missouri side of the Mississippi.

David Kraushaar, chief of the FCC broadcast bureau, described the hearing examiner's report, along with his recommendation, as "replete with error." It should not be allowed to stand, he told the commissioners. He said the examiner had "glossed over" the CBS record in programming, which, he said, showed that it "has not stressed" religious, civic and agricultural programs.

"There is nothing to show that CBS would be continually responsive to community needs," he added.

S. I. Rosenman, representing CBS, said the network has a record of 30 years in broadcasting and has "greater sensitivity" to the needs of St. Louis than the other applicants because it has operated radio station KMOX there for 26 years and many CBS top executives have worked at KMOX.

INJUNCTION ORDERED TO PREVENT BOYCOTT

State Supreme Court Ruling Favors Adams Dairy Over Union.

By the Jefferson City Post-Patch Correspondent.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 10—The Missouri Supreme Court yesterday ordered Circuit Judge Raymond E. LaDriere of St. Louis county to grant an injunction sought by Adams Dairy, Inc., to prevent Local 603 of the Milk Wagon Drivers' and Inside Dairy Employes' Union from boycotting products of the concern.

The court noted that until July, 1954, the Adams Dairy drivers and other union workers were represented by Local 603. Thereafter the drivers formed the "Independent Wholesale Dairy Products Salesmen's Association," and the latter was recognized by the National Labor Relations Board as bargaining agent for the drivers.

Contrary to Policy.

"It is inconceivable," the court said yesterday, "that the public policy of this state should be to label as a legitimate labor objective the willful and intentional damaging or destruction of an employer's business because the employer is doing that which the federal law requires him to do and forbids him to change if he is to remain in business."

The Supreme Court observed that officers of Local 603, in opposing the independent union, had passed out pamphlets to store customers where Adams milk was available for sale, and further that the purpose admittedly had been to damage Adam's business and help members of Local 603.

"Concerted union activity has uniformly been held to be unlawful," the court said, "when the purpose is not primarily intended to benefit the union in carrying out a lawful objective or to improve working conditions, but has as its primary purpose injury to the business of the person against whom the action is directed."

Jurisdiction Declined.

The Supreme Court, in another action, declined to assume jurisdicion of a legal question raised by Circuit Judge Douglas L. C. Jones of St. Louis county to determine whether his election in 1954 was for a full six-year term or for only two years. It denied his petition for a writ to prevent election officials frm holding a nominating primary for his court division in the Aug. 7 election.

A 1953 legislative act creating two new divisions of St. Louis county circuit court provided that, despite any other provisions of the act, the two judges elected in 1954 would be chosen for two years only. Judge Jones, a Democrat, contended this was unconstitutional.

In another action yesterday, the Supreme Court permitted Missouri Public Expenditure Survey, a governmental fact-finding agency, to intervene in a pending suit to determine legality of the $75,000,000 state building bond issue for penal, eleemosynary and higher education insttituions.

The court authorized the fact-finding agency to file a brief as friend of the court, in a proceeding instituted by the State Board of Fund Commissioners to obtain a ruling on validity of steps taken in submitting the bond proposal to voters last Jan. 24.

5 NEW INFANTILE PARALYSIS CASES IN THE ST. LOUIS AREA

Five new cases of infantile paralysis were reported in the area yesterday, bringing the total for the year to 24, double the number reported at the same time last year, the St. Louis-St. Louis county chapter, National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis announced.

Three of the persons have a paralytic form of polio and are being treated at City Hospital. They are Peggy Roberts, 4 years old, 3715 Olive street; Allen Campbell, 21 months old, 3715 Olive street, and Jerry Nichols, 3, 2106 North Fourteenth street.

Persons with non-paralytic forms of the disease are Mrs. Richard Dunn, 24, of Valley Park, at St. Anthony Hospital, and Gary Hawkins, 3 of 1917 Blair avenue, at City Hospital. The chapter said neither Hawkins nor Nichols had received a Salk vaccine injectnon.

Sight of Beret Loosens Tongue And Ends Raft's Crisis at Sea

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 10—A Navy transport put into port yesterday with a tale of a mid-ocean meeting with three French Canadians on a 35 by 35 foot raft.

Capt. Harry D. Chemnitz, of the Navy Transport General R. E. Callin, told of seeing an orange flare four o'clock Thursday morning and racing his ship to the spot where they found the raft and the three men who set out from Halifax May 24 to drift and sail across the Atlanic.

The captain of the raft, Henri Beaudout, wearing a jaunty beret with a large red pompom, clambered aboard the ship.

Beaudout got stage fright when he faced the passengers and crew of the Callan and stammered he could not speak English.

Capt. Chemnitz sent below for his own French beret, and the minute he put it on Beaudout found he could make himself understood in English.

Beaudout explained the raft's predicament and sailors on the Callan handed down six roasted ducks, fresh fruit, canned food and milk and a quart of milk of magnesia.

Tax Lien Against Boston Post.

BOSTON, July 10 (AP) — A $219,266 lien was filed yesterday against the Post Publishing Co. by the Internal Revenue Service for withholding taxes due for the quarter ended June 30. Publisher John Fox suspended publication of the 125-year-old newspaper last Saturday but it resumed publication after John S. Bottomly, a Boston attorney, took a 24-day option to buy the newspaper.

See what happens... Switch to Shell!

Now, a radar test for gasolines.

The two new cars shown above are identical. The lead car has used only Shell Premium with TCP*, its twin only a competitive premium-grade gasoline. Each was driven 3000 miles. Photo shows finish of wide-open-throttle acceleration test with results checked by radar. In this and similar tests, most TCP-fueled cars won "hands down"—delivering 6 to 18% faster acceleration.

Radar shows Shell Premium with TCP leaves competitive gasolines behind

When you plunk down your "hard earned" for one of today's new automobiles, you expect it to perform—to provide the kind of acceleration that even the most careful driver sometimes needs for safety.

It does, too, at least for about the first 3500 miles. Then some of that too-hot-to-hold performance may slip away.

The reason? Modern high-compression engines are especially sensitive to harmful deposits. These deposits can cause short circuits in the spark plugs or pre-firing of the gasoline. Shell Premium Gasoline with TCP overcomes deposits, stops spark plug "miss" and pre-firing.

Dramatic proof of TCP's effectiveness is shown above. In radar-observed tests like this one, Shell Premium with TCP out-accelerated competition as much as 18%.

Switch to Shell and get back lost power as you drive! See your neighborhood Shell Dealer today!

*Shell's Trademark for this unique gasoline additive developed by Shell Research. Patent applied for. The above statements may also apply to other companies which produce high octane gasoline if they are licensed by Shell to use TCP.

Khrushchev Drunk, Insulted Westerners, British Papers Say

Alleged Outburst Occurred at Party Attended by Gen. Twining—Bulganin Reported Intoxicated, Too.

LONDON, July 10 (AP)—Two British newspapers asserted today that Nikita Khrushchev drunkenly insulted western representatives at a big Moscow party recently.

A British Foreign Office spokesman, questioned about the reports, commented: "I have no reason to believe that anyone was insulted." Other western diplomats here said they felt the reports were exaggerated.

The occasion for Khruschev's alleged outburst was a banquet and garden party given by the Soviet Defense Ministry June 24 to celebrate Red Air Force Day.

Among those attending were Gen. Nathan F. Twining, United States Air Force chief of staff; Nigel Birch, British air minister; envoys and military men representing all the leading western powers.

The British papers—the Daily Mail and the Daily Telegraph—declared in front-page stories that both Khrushchev, who is Communist party chief, and Soviet Premier Bulganin were drunk. They gave this account:

The two men argued violently as to who should speak.

Khrushchev apparently won. He then insulted nearly every guest of nearly every nationality present—personally as well as nationally. The nature of the insults was not specified.

The Daily Mail, attributing its information to "an American who was present," said Khrushchev and Bulganin angered other Russian ministers by their behavior. It said the other ministers later apologized personally to Twining and Birch.

Both papers said the performances of Khrushchev and Bulganin have posed the question even in Moscow:

How long can the two men keep up the pace of such drinking?

The Daily Telegraph described the affair as "the most incredible episode to date in the incredible career of Mr. Khrushchev" and said Moscow censorship has held up "all reports on the subject."

Its version, datelined Washington, said in part:

"Mr. Khrushchev . . . chose this moment to beat even his own record for drunken behavior. This time he was joined in his cups by Marshal Bulganin. . . .

"The two leaders fell into a violent argument as to which should make a speech. Mr. Khrushchev tried to outshout Marshal Bulganin and ordered him to sit down since he (Mr. Khrushchev) was going to talk.

"Mr. Khrushchev then managed to insult nearly every guest of nearly every nationality present. These insults were both national and personal. Some guests did not get the point since Mr. Khrushchev was speaking in Russian. Others did and they replied with vigor.

Apologies by Zhukov.

"The unfortunate Marshal Zhukov (defense minister) had to pick up the pieces. He personally apologized to many of the insulted guests.

"The Moscow party was the last such incident needed to convince the Western powers that Mr. Khrushchev's behavior goes beyond a tiresome individual idiosyncracy and that it has in fact become an important factor in evaluating Russian policy.

"Those familiar with Mr. Khrushchev's day by day activities question how long anyone can stand the pace of such drinking. They wonder how long his colleagues, especially in the army, will put up with behavior that creates enemies by the dozen and makes the Russian leader the object of ridicule before foreigners."

The British Foreign Office spokesman told a news conference his office has received a report of the party from Ambassador Sir William Hayter in Moscow. Submission of such reports of social occasions is normal.

Unofficially British informants said they understood Hayter's dispatch mentioned that there had been some hard drinking.

An American informant said he had seen no parallel report of the affair from United States Ambassador Charles Bohlen. The informant would have been in a position to see any such report. He added, however, that he has heard some gossip about the party.

FAVORS $10 POLITICAL GIFT FROM EACH MAN'S TAXES

A plan whereby up to $10 could be sliced from a person's total tax bill and used for political contributions, was urged last night by James L. Sullivan, Democratic candidate for Representative from the Second Congressional District, at a meeting of the Twenty-third ward Democratic Organization.

This method, as opposed to a similar deduction from a taxpayer's income, Sullivan said, would increase interest in elections because each person could make an entirely free contribution to the party or candidate of his choice. It also would aid in financing federal elections, he continued.

He pointed out that in the 1952 national election, 70 per cent of the funds contributed to the Eisenhower campaign was in donations of $1000 or more. There is a dire need for interest on the part of the average citizen, he said.

BENSON PICKS IOWA STATE FOR U.S. LABORATORY

Says Livestock Group Urged College Site at Ames for Animal Disease Building.

WASHINGTON, July 10 (AP) —Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson today picked Iowa State College at Ames, a school he once attended, as the site for the Government's new $18,000,000 animal disease laboratory.

In a statement issued by the department, Benson said this location had been recommended by Livestock Industry Advisory Committee which surveyed a number of proposed sites.

Congress now has under consideration a request for funds to set up the new center which is planned to provide for research on 25 animal diseases.

Feed Area Centers.

Ames is in the center of the nation's hog and cattle feeding area, but is some distance from the range cattle and sheep producing areas of the country.

Benson commended the advisory committee for what he described as its "excellent work in evaluating the many proposals before it."

Other locations which had been considered were Madison, Wis.; Columbia, Mo.; Manhattan, Kan.; Stillwater, Okla; Athens, Ga., and College Station, Tex.; and Fort Collins, Colo.

Benson said Ames was selected for the following reasons:

It is far removed from any critical target area, is considered an outstanding scientific center, has excellent and continuing research activity at Iowa State College which would help in the laboratory work and has an excellent library on subjects which would be of value to laboratory scientists.

Central Location.

Benson said Ames, a city of approximately 20,000 is centrally-located and readily accessible. He said a suitable site was available near the campus and that land would be provided without cost to the Government. Adequate sewage facilities, electric current and water will be made available by the community.

Benson said the site committee recommended Colorado A. and M. College at Fort Collins as an alternative location if the one at Iowa State College proved to be not feasible.

MAN CHARGED WITH ASSAULT AND MOLESTATION OF GIRL, 5

Warrants charging George F. Austermann, a maintenance man, of the 1500 block of South Third street, with assault with intent to do great bodily harm and child molestation in the whipping of a 5-year-old girl were issued yesterday by the circuit attorney's office.

The girl told police Austermann, a friend of her family, whipped her and molested her at his room Saturday night. Her 7-year-old brother, who also was present for a time, said he saw Austermann place a knife against the girl's neck but did not witness the alleged whipping or molestation, police reported.

Austermann, 69, said he gave the girl a soft drink when she followed him to his home but denied striking or molesting her. Police said a belt Austermann was wearing when arrested was the same width as some of the bruises on the girl's body. She was treated at City Hospital.

HILLSBORO (MO.) WOMAN KILLED WHEN AUTO UPSETS

Mrs. Anna M. Meyer of Hillsboro, Mo., was killed and her husband was injured yesterday when the automobile in which they were riding overturned on State Route 30 at High Ridge in Jefferson county.

They were passengers in a car driven by LeRoy A. Wille, 40 years old, also of Hillsboro. The State Highway Patrol reported that the car overturned after Wille, who was westbound, swerved when an automobile ahead of him started to make a left turn from the highway. Neither Wille nor the driver of the other car, Mrs. Lucille Fields, 39, of House Springs, was injured, the patrol reported.

Mrs. Meyer was 69. Her husband, 71, was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, Kirkwood, for treatment for internal injuries and lacerations of the face.

FORMER DWIGHT DAVIS HOME BOUGHT AS LAOS EMBASSY

WASHINGTON, July 10 (UP) —The Government of Laos has purchased as its embassy the former showplace mansion of the St. Louis sportsman who gave the Davis cup to world tennis.

Laotian Embassy officals said today their government has purchased the four-story brick home of the late Dwight F. Davis. The purchase price was reported to be $225,000.

Davis, Secretary of War under President Coolidge, died in 1945. His widow died last December.

Senate Unit Votes to Return Property of Germans, Japanese

Chances for Final Passage Called Doubtful—U.S. Would Have to Pay About $500,000,000.

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, July 10—The Senate Judiciary Committee unanimously approved yesterday a bill to return to its original owners all German and Japanese property seized by the United States in World War II.

The largest single property affected would be the General Aniline & Film Corp., which is estimated to be worth more than $100,000,000. It was seized from Interhandel, a Swiss company which the United States charges is really owned by I. G. Farben, the German chemical concern.

Altogether the United States would have to pay about $500,000,000 in cash and property to former enemy owners under the legislation approved yesterday. The former owners would receive all profits and increments in value since the seizure. If the Government has already sold their property, they would be given the sale price plus interest.

Opposed by Administration.

The Administration has vigorously opposed any general restitution bill for former enemy assets. It has proposed instead legislation which would return up to $10,000 to individuals—not corporations—as a matter of grace.

Chances for final passage of the committee-approved bill at this session are doubtful.

The whole question of enemy assets has been the subject of an extraordinarily active lobbying effort. The former owners of General Aniline are reported to have led the way in the legislative area as well as in the courts, where they have fought Justice Department efforts to sell the company. They contend that its owners were Swiss, not German.

Those favoring restitution have argued that seizing the enemy assets was justified in time of war, but that it is against American tradition to turn this seizure into permanent confiscation without payment. Restitution bills in the past have been sponsored by Republican Senators Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois and William Langer of North Dakota. The primary supporter now is Senator Olin D. Johnston (Dem.), South Carolina.

Those who oppose restitution point out that the United States agreed with several of the allies after World War II to keep the seized property in lieu of reparations. Germany and Japan have agreed in treaties with the United States, furthermore, to compensate their nationals for loss of property seized here.

Under a 1948 act, the Government is directed to sell all seized property and use the proceeds to pay Americans' claims against the former enemies. More than $225,000,000 worth of assets have already been sold under this program.

Litigation Pending.

General Aniline has not been sold because of a provision in the law barring sales while litigation is pending.

The bill approved yesterday would compensate both the former enemy owners of seized property and Americans who have claims against Germany and Japan.

In the case of claims concerning Germany, payments would be made from funds which the West German Federal Republic has agreed to repay the United States for economic aid since World War II.

The committee bill forbids payment to persons convicted of having impressed slave labor or committed murder or ill treatment in World War II, or persons who were voluntary members of the Nazi party or similar Japanese groups. Payments to persons now behind the Iron Curtain would be withheld until the Secretary of State certified that return would be in the interest of the United States, or until Congress acted.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 10—Assessed valuation of real estate and personal property in St. Louis for 1956 tax purposes is $1,403,319,000 and in St. Louis county the valuation is $951,769,169, the State Tax Commission announced yesterday.

Including the valuation of public utility plants in St. Louis that are assessed by the state, the final assessed valuation for the city is $1,675,107,618. The county figure will be increased to slightly more than one billion dollars with the addition of utility plant property assessed by the state and the locally assessed merchants and manufacturers valuation.

The tax commission ordered St. Louis county to increase the valuation reported for cattle by 20 per cent but ordered no increase in the county's realty figures. Last year the commission ordered the county to make sharp increases in farm and town valuations. No increase was ordered for the City of St. Louis.

THOMAS EAGLETON FOR NEW LAW ON JUVENILE CRIMES

State law should be changed to give the Circuit Attorney the power to determine whether juveniles suspected of offenses punishable by death should be tried as adults or in the Juvenile Court, Thomas F. Eagleton, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Circuit Attorney, said last night.

Eagleton spoke at a meeting of the Twenty-third Ward Democratic Organization, which indorsed him for the nomination.

Joseph L. Walsh, one of Eagleton's opponents, also spoke at the meeting, at 4233 Hampton avenue, and declared that if elected he would not be an "armshair circuit attorney." Walsh, a former assistant circuit attorney, said the office needs a "hard-hitting, two-fisted experienced prosecutor."

DRIVER WITHOUT LICENSE GETS 30 DAYS IN JAIL

Milton J. Huber, a laborer, 15 North Eighth street, Belleville, was sentenced to 30 days in the St. Clair county jail yesterday by County Judge William P. Fleming at Belleville when he pleaded guilty of driving an automobile without a driver's license.

Judge Fleming directed that the jail sentence run concurrently with a 10-day sentence imposed on Huber last Saturday by Justice of the Peace Charles C. Wright of Swansea on a similar charge.

In addition to the 10-day jail sentence, Wright assessed fines totaling $75 against Huber for traffic violations. Huber, 24 years old, has been arrested 18 times for traffic violations in the last six years.

East Berlin Strike Is Won.

BERLIN, July 10 (AP)—A West Berlin newspaper said today slaughter house workers in Communist East Berlin have won a strike protesting an increased work quota. The Telgraf said a six-hour strike last week convinced Communist officials they should drop an effort to raise work quotas by 35 per cent.

NIXON CONFERS WITH TURKS ON CYPRUS, RUSSIA

ANKARA, July 10 (AP) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon took off for Washington early today after a night of talks with Turkish leaders about Cyprus and Turkey's economic difficulties.

Nixon told airport reporters he, President Celal Bayar and Premier Menderes also discussed "the general world situation, especially the new tactics of the Communist leaders."

Nixon added he found Turkey's officials "very realistic about the so-called Soviet new look."

"Like us," he said, "they are glad to hear words but are looking for deeds before relaxing military preparedness."

Nixon's plane was to make a three-hour refueling stop at Majorca, in the Balearic islands, where the Vice President was to confer with Spanish foreign minister Alberto Martin Artajo.

United States sources said "no special significance" should be read into the meeting.

Also scheduled to be on hand from Madrid to greet the Nixons were John Davis Lodge, United States Ambassador to Spain, and Mrs. Lodge.

Nixon is winding up a rapid round-the-world trip which in the past week has taken him also to the Philippines, South Viet Nam, Formosa, Thailand and Pakistan.

25 PLANES FINISH, 23 MORE DUE IN WOMEN'S DERBY

FLINT, Mich., July 10 (AP)—Twenty-three planes entered in the powder puff derby for women pilots were due in a Flint City airport today, ending a 2336-mile flight from California.

Deadline for finishing the tenth annual race from San Carlos, Calif., to Flint was 5 p.m. Any entries who fail to make it by them are automatically disqualified.

Twenty-five planes, led by Mrs. Joyce Failing of Baker, Calif., in her Beechcraft Bonanza, have crossed the finish line.

The race is flown on a handicap basis, and the winner won't be announced until tomorrow when elapsed flying time is computed against the power of the engines.

CHANCE VOUGHT AIRCRAFT
Needs
EXPERIENCED ENGINEERS

This may be your opportunity to join the winning team in Dallas that has designed and is producing in quantity the Chance Vought CRUSADER, "World's Fastest Navy Fighter," as well as the highly successful REGULUS guided missile.

Aircraft experience is not essential but we do want aggressive, imaginative engineers — men whose growth potential can parallel the rapid industrial expansion of this area. Enjoy a low cost of living and the friendly, informal, outdoor life typical of Texas. Opportunities at many levels exist in these areas:

AERODYNAMICS
(Preliminary Design, Wind Tunnel, Stability, Control).

AIRFRAME DESIGN
(Fuselage, Wing and Tail).

MECHANICAL DESIGN
(Equipment and Engine Installation, Electrical and Hydraulics Systems, Landing Gear, Controls and Armament).

ELECTRONICS SYSTEMS DESIGN
(Automatic Controls and Guidance, Advanced Systems Development, Reliability and Packaging).

PROPULSION ANALYSIS
(Installed Engine Performances, Heat Transfer, Duct Design).

WEAPON SYTEMS

STRUCTURES DESIGN
(Stress Analysis, Materials, Weight Control).

FLIGHT TEST ENGINEERING
(Flight Test Analysis, Testing, and Instrumentation).

SALESMEN WANTED 83

STOP SEARCHING START EARNING
$300-$400 weekly commissions immediately selling NEW TYPE (patent pending) ROTO BEAM SAFETY SIGNAL for DANGEROUS school crossings which has Division of Highways approval.
The signal sells for $295. Most schools NEED and WANT them and many will buy them but our EASIEST sales come from PARENT-TEACHERS clubs and business firms who give them to schools. The sponsors have their name on a courtesy plaque, also in newspaper, radio, TV publicity and "SAVE A CHILD" has unusual appeal.
If you can finance yourself and hire and train others, EXCLUSIVE FRANCHISES are available in several states, where distributors can earn $15,000-$20,000 annually.
This is definitely a ground-floor opportunity for a responsible salesman or salesmanager. Call Merle V. Watson, CE 1-5267.

Rising Temperatures Forecast

—Associated Press Wirephoto
Low temperatures and areas of precipitation expected tonight.

The temperature trend here will be upward in the next couple of days, Assistant Weatherman Arthur A. Rausch said today. "Upward is about the only way it can go," he said in view of a cool low of 62 this morning.

Generally fair weather will prevail through Thursday, the forecaster said. At this time there is no precipitation in the picture. Temperatures will range tomorrow from about 65 to the upper 80s and on Thursday from 70 to 90 degrees or higher.

No rain fell in the area during the last 24-hour reporting period, and total for the year stands at 17.90 inches against a normal 20.83 inches. July thus far has been a good deal wetter than normal, with a fall of 2.25 inches compared to a normal of .99 of an inch.

Precipitation throughout the country was confined yesterday mainly to the eastern parts, with scattered amounts in Oregon, Oklahoma and Kansas. Heaviest in the nation was 2 inches at New Orleans. The center section of the country was mostly dry from Indiana westward to the coast, with the plateau states bearing high temperatures.

Minimum state temperatures this morning ranged from 52 at Farmington to 63 at Kansas City. The national scale was from 35 at Fraser, Colo. to 82 at Yuma, Ariz. Maximum Missouri reading yesterday was 88 at Malden. Nation-wide high mark was 114 at Needles, Calif.

With Atomic Weapons Barred, West Germans Have No Taste For Draft and Rearmament

What Good Would Our 12 Divisions Be in Nuclear War? They Ask—Conscription Term Not Set—Inflation Peril in Manufacture of Arms.

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Ret.)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

BONN.

THE new German military establishment is hardly off the ground but the Germans couldn't care less.

The sun has been shining and it has been warm, even hot, after months of cold and rainy weather. Germans have donned their hiking packs or have loaded their miniature cars with camping equipment to get out of doors at last. In every stream, pond and village swimming pool the young fry, pale in their bathing suits, are playing in the water.

In spite of the acrid debates in the Bundestag, the perilous problems of German rearmament are forgotten. The average German looks upon conscription, just voted, much as does the average American. He does not like it but he accepts it as a necessity to which he must bow.

There are plenty of external and internal problems left to be solved in building a German military force. The conscription bill just passed does not define the length of service—12 months, 18 months or what.

Bundesrat Must Approve.

This was the result of a political deal. The law providing for conscription must be approved by the Bundesrat as well as by the Bundestag. The Bundesrat is a sort of senior chamber consisting of representatives of the various German states. The representatives are appointed by the minister—presidents of the states and each state has a vote depending upon its population.

This upper house, a peculiar and undemocratic device, was imposed upon the Germans by the Allies. It must approve certain laws among which are the conscription law. Two states making the necessary majority agreed to approve the conscription law but would not agree to the term of service of 18 months.

So a deal was made that the conscription law, without a stated period of service, would be passed by the Bundesrat. This leaves the critical question of the length of conscript service to be decided by the Bundestag this fall. This important detail does not need to be referred to the Bundesrat.

Draft Next April.

Passage of the legislation authorizing conscription does give the German defense establishment a go-ahead signal to make plans to draft men next April. Regardless of the length of service, the Defense Ministry can now start registering draftees, arranging for their medical examination and preparing to induct them.

Many other problems are involved in German rearmament. What, some Germans ask, is the good of 12 divisions in an atomic war? Others fear that the rearmament of West Germany will hinder the unification of Germany. This is the battle cry of the opposition Social Democratic party.

This important political faction, whether from conviction or expediency, argues that the rearmament of Western Germany will prevent German unification. This is merely an acceptance of the Soviet threat if Western Germany rearms unification will be impossible.

First Admission.

East Germany already has an army of 120,000 men, called ironically by the West Germans the barracks police, since East Germany has maintained that they were police and not an army. Just recently East Germany announced that it, along with other eastern European states, was reducing its army from 120,000 to 90,000. This is the first admission officially that the barracks police is an army.

West Germany, although with three times the population of East Germany, now has an army of only 22,000 men.

The contention of the Adenauer administration is that unless Germany is strong in itself there is no chance of dealing with the Soviets. The government feels that if, in its international dealings, Germany has to depend upon the strength of its allies only to support its case for reunification it will not be able to make a case.

To an observer from overseas this is so obvious that the policy of the opposition party, the Social Democrats, of making an issue of rearmament as hindering the reunification of Germany seems much like degrading politicial issues to pander to the new and unexpected German distaste for any more militarism.

Atomic Weapons Needed.

The Germans are not stupid militarily. They are asking what good will be our 12 divisions in an atomic war? This is a good question. If the war that the Germans are to be prepared for is to be an atomic war, it is apparent that the Germans will have to be given atomic weapons.

(They are not allowed to make them.)

German authorities have not made an issue of this problem. They realize that if they raise it, France, Belgium, Holland and other allies of the United States will also.

This is a bonafide and serious problem that the United States has failed to meet with all its North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies. The United States cannot dole out atomic weapons like a parent distributing candy. If they are to be used, every nation involved must have the same access and right to them.

Prosperity in Germany has held back the German army. Volunteers are not interested in the military service in the current booming German economy. Furthermore, legislation providing for career privileges and retirement of career officers and soldiers has not been passed, so many who might volunteer are waiting until they find out what a professional military career will mean.

Facilities Gone.

Facilities are lacking, strange to report, for the new and small German military establishment. The old army kasernes have either been sold to industry, taken over by the Allied forces or used for housing of refugees and Germans. German building is already making maximum use of labor and materials. Further military construction, and this is inevitable, will bring on the danger of inflation.

This is also true of German manufacture of armaments. German industry is already completely occupied. Imposing the manufacture of armaments on it will require a reduction in export or will result in inflation if no control over exports is imposed.

On this account it is being proposed in Germany that arms needed be purchased abroad instead of being manufactured in Germany.

The supposedly militaristic Germans have no enthusiasm for rearmament or military service. They are accepting it glumly as part of their obligation in joining NATO and as their responsibility as a sovereign state. Far from having to be held back, they may need a lot of pushing before their 12 divisions and 20 air force wings become a reality.

Russians Offer Aid to Greece in Pravda Article

Soviet Proposal Designed to Exploit Dispute Over Cyprus.

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

MOSCOW, July 10.

THE Soviet Union yesterday offered technical and economic aid to Greece, the Balkan keystone of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The offer took the form of broad hints by Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, that great economic benefits could accrue to Greece as soon as that nation improves its relations with the Soviet Union.

This overture came less than two weeks after Dmitri T. Shepilov, Soviet Foreign Minister, paid a two-day godwill visit to the country on his return from the Middle East.

It also came at a time when Greek relations with its western allies, notably Britain and Turkey, are reaching the critical stage over the issue of the union of Cyprus with Greece.

Moving adroitly to exploit this situation, Pravda declared yesterday that there is not "an insurmountable obstacle to the development of friendly relations and business-like cooperation in every field" between Russia and Greece.

There are "chances" for Soviet-Greek economic contacts, Pravda said, and "Greek workers, tobacco and wine growers and business circles would feel it tangibly."

The newspaper said the Soviet Union is ready "to give a sympathetic and disinterested consideration to co-operation in the development of the Greek national economy." It proposed an exchange of scientific and technical information and the training of specialists.

Pravda professed the most lofty motives in the offer to help develop the Greek economy and added: "True to its principles the Soviet Union does not, naturally, present any terms to Greece that could affect her sovereignty and national dignity."

ROME'S MAYOR ELECTED SECOND TIME IN WEEK

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

ROME, July 10—Rome's marathon mayoralty election which has been going on for nearly a week in a struggle among Democrats, Neo-Fascists and pro-Communists ended here last night with the second and final election of Umberto Tupini as the city's chief executive. He resigned after his first election was protested by right wing Socialists.

Tupini, a founder of the 35-year-old Catholic political movement in Italy, was elected, 46 to 29. His nearest rival, a candidate backed by the 20 Communists and the nine pro-Communist Socialists on the 80-man city council.

Tupini's election was never in doubt. The only question was whether he would accept the support of the 10 members of the almost wholly Fascist Italian Social Movement.

Tupini did, but with a qualification. He indicated that he would join the anti-Communist and anti-Fascist Democratic minority in the city council in giving Rome a largely non-political city administration.

WASHINGTON, July 10 (AP).

SENATOR ARTHUR V. WATKINS (Rep.), Utah, acted last night to try to by-pass the Judiciary Committee and force a showdown in the Senate on the Administration's program for liberalizing immigration laws.

He offered the Administration's proposals as amendments to a bill already approved by the Judiciary Committee, to admit 350 Basque sheepherders into the United States on a non-quota basis.

The amendments would revise the McCarran-Walter Immigration Law in line with recommendations submitted to Congress by President Eisenhower last February and also would extend the 1953 Refugee Relief Act for another year.

Thus, Watkins served notice that when—and if—the sheepherder bill is called up for action in the Senate, he will attempt to make it a vehicle for a broad overhaul of existing immigration laws.

Senator Humphrey (Dem.), Minnesota, told Watkins that Democratic Senators also plan to offer a lot of amendments to the sheepherder bill.

The Senate Immigration subcommittee, a unit of the Judiciary Committee, has taken no action on Mr. Eisenhower's recommendations for revising the law.

Mr. Eisenhower asked Congress to increase the present annual immigration quota of 154,657 by about 65,000, permit a limited pooling of unused quotas, and make more than a score of changes in the administrative provisions of present law.

HAMMARSKJOLD SCHEDULES VISIT TO MIDDLE EAST

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., July 10 (UP)—United Nations Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold's office today announced he will make a visit to the Middle East next week.

A spokesman said Hammarskjold's plan to visit Cairo and Jerusalem was not connected with reports of tension in the area.

Hammarskjold is now in Vienna on a swing through eastern Europe, which included five days in Moscow.

The U.N. announcement said he had found scheduled meetings in Geneva would not take as much time as he had expected, permitting him to go to Israel and Egypt.

Hammarskjold, with the backing of the Security Council, made a four-week visit to the Middle East in April, and arranged a cease-fire between Israel and its Arab neighbors. Tension has continued, however.

Japan Second in Shipbuilding.

TOKYO, July 10 (UP)—Japan has climbed to second place in the world's shipbuilding industry, topped only by Britain, the Japanese Transportation Ministry claimed today.

FLEESON

Trial Balloon Season for Democrats

By DORIS FLEESON
WASHINGTON.

JULY is trial balloon month in Democratic politics. Adlai Stevenson will postpone any decision about vice president until he has the needed majority of delegates for the presidential nomination safely counted in his corner. Meanwhile, he is not averse to all the discussion about possible choices; in fact, his aids are helping it along.

Their theory is that every name tossed in the air brings a reaction which will show both its assets and liabilities.

Former President Harry S. Truman is proving that he is an old pro by not tipping his hand. Despite the time spent with Gov. Averell Harriman in New York and the emergence of so many Truman lieutenants on the Harriman staff, he has made no promises to anyone. The Stevenson camp felt better after it had established this as a fact.

Stevenson's attitude toward the Harriman candidacy sincerely is that it is more a nuisance than a real threat. His strategists have toyed with schemes designed to show the New York Governor that, left to their own devices, the New York delegates would vote gladly for Adlai. It does not appear, however, that anything short of a roll call at Chicago will convince Harriman.

From his point of view, far too many of them and the Democratic-controlled Congress are intimating that President Eisenhower will be successful in his bid for a second term.

The immediate effect of this is financial. Democrats are scraping the bottom of the barrel to finance their convention.

They have no hope of matching the television time of the Republicans. A possible solution of this problem is a bill which has been drafted by legislative experts requiring all the TV chains to give equal time to the candidates for President free of charge.

Its fate largely depends on Speaker Sam Rayburn, who has expressed restrained support for it. If the Speaker decides it ought to pass in the House, he probably can muster the votes for it. Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson has another bare majority for it in the Senate.

CHILDS

Adams Citing Eisenhower's Willingness to Run Again as Lure to Senatorial Candidates

'Deputy' Argues That Since President Is Going to Make Race After a Second Major Illness, Those Who Believe in Him Owe Him Co-operation.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch
(Copyright 1956, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

WASHINGTON, July 10.

UNDER the direction of Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams, working in close collaboration with Republican National Chairman Leonard Hall, a strenuous effort is being made to get strong candidates to run for the Senate on the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket in November.

Adams is using the argument that since the President is willing to run despite his second major illness in nine months, then surely he can expect the co-operation of those who believe in him and his program.

That argument was used to persuade John Sherman Cooper to overcome his reluctance to leave his present position as ambassador to India and try for the Senate seat in Kentucky, left vacant by the death of Alben W. Barkley.

But with Cooper it took a personal telephone call from the President himself to get him to change his mind. While Cooper sat in Adams's office in the White House, the call was put through to the President convalescing at his farm at Gettysburg. When Cooper heard from the President himself that support of the Eisenhower policies in Congress was of paramount importance, he had no choice but to agree to yield to the draft of Kentucky Republicans.

Doubt About Popularity.

One reason for Adams' determination to strengthen the ticket wherever possible is the recognition that the President's second illness has taken some of the edge off his popularity.

But in his dedicated loyalty to the President, Adams goes further than this. With an acute awareness of the President's struggles in the first two years of his Administration with hostile Republicans such as Senator Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin, the deputy president—Adams is hardly less than that—would like to see an Eisenhower party with the balance of power in Congress.

After weeks of persuasion, initiated by Adams, Gov. Arthur B. Langlie of the state of Washington agreed to run for the Senate against Senator Warren Magnuson.

Langlie Made Keynoter.

Although he is a Democrat, Magnuson has had the support of influential Republicans because of his proved ability to get favors for his home state. To build up Langlie, he has been made keynoter of the Republican national convention in San Francisco in August.

The effort has not been abandoned to persuade former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, twice his party's nominee for the presidency, to run for the Senate against Senator Herbert Lehman. At the end of his third term as Governor, Dewey announced that he was leaving public life to enter the private practice of law so that he could provide properly for his family.

The argument has been used with him, it is said here, that he need not give up all his law practice, but merely the foreign clients he represents. The government of Turkey is one of Dewey's clients from which, according to his statement registering as an agent of that government, the Dewey law firm receives $150,000 a year. Many members of Congress, both past and present, have retained connections with their law firms back home while serving in Senate or House.

Denied an Appointment.

The pressure put on Cooper is ironic in view of his own past relationship with the White House. Elected to the Senate for a two-year term in 1952, and running for re-election in '54, he was disturbed about the effect of the Dixon-Yates private power deal in Kentucky where low-cost power from the Tennessee Valley Authority is a political factor. At that time Cooper tried to see the President to tell him personally that he thought the Dixon-Yates deal was wrong and that it would have a harmful political effect. It was reported then that Adams refused to give him a presidential appointment.

On another question of basic policy it is hardly a secret that Cooper has been decidedly

BULGANIN BLAMES IMPERIALISTS FOR THE KOREAN WAR

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

MOSCOW, July 10—Soviet Premier Bulganin declared last night that the Korean war was a "just struggle" by North Korea in a war "imposed by imperialists."

Bulganin re-affirmed the Soviet view of the Korean war at a reception in the Kremlin in honor of Kim Il Sung, Premier of North Korea, who is on an official visit here.

There has been in the West recently a great amount of speculation about Communist party chief Nikita S. Khrushchev's secret speech at the February party Congress. It is believed that in criticizing Stalin then he touched on the events leading up to the Korean War. The section of Khrushchev's speech dealing with foreign affairs was missing from the version recently made public by the United States State Department.

Bulganin last night did not deviate from the standard public line on the Korean war and there was no indication in his words whether another point of view about it exists here.

NEW U.S. JOB RIGHTS PROGRAM STARTS AUG. 1

WASHINGTON, July 10 (UP) The Civil Service Commission said yesterday a new employment rights program for federal employes will go into effect on Aug. 1. It previously had been expected the program would start July 1.

Under the program, which was announced in May, federal employes with re-employment rights under the current system must use them between Aug. 1 and Feb. 1, 1957, or lose them.

Those who do not exercise their rights during that six month period will remain as permanent employes of the agency where they currently are working.

Increased job security will be gained by thousands of federal workers when the six-month period expires on Feb. 1. These are the people in jobs to which other employes have had re-employment rights and who, therefore, have been unable to acquire full tenure rights while serving in these positions.

An Important Message to Married Couples With Property in Joint Names

A GREAT many people—particularly married couples—have some or all of their property in joint names. Property owned jointly with the right of survivorship passes directly to the survivor by operation of law upon the death of one joint owner. This is a convenient means of disposing of an estate but may be disadvantageous from the tax standpoint.

The table at right compares the tax-cost of disposing of a married man's estate under two different plans. Plan A is to put the entire estate in the joint names of husband and wife. Plan B is to keep all of the estate in the husband's name and then dispose of it under his own will under a plan which would divide the estate between two trusts for his wife—one trust to qualify for the "marital deduction" and the other trust not to qualify. His wife would be paid all of the income from both trusts. She would have the right to dispose of the principal of the marital deduction trust by her own will; whereas, the principal of the other trust would be disposed of after her death by the terms of her husband's will.

From the estate tax standpoint, the two-trust method is far superior to the joint property method unless the estate is less than $60,000—the amount exempt from Federal estate taxes.

The best way to develop a satisfactory estate plan is to confer with our officers about practical business and financial questions and with your own lawyer, who should draw your will and advise you on all legal matters. We cordially invite you to confer with us at your convenience and in confidence about your estate. There is no obligation involved.

TABLE COMPARING TAX COSTS OF TWO PLANS

Size of Estate		Plan A: Property in Joint Names		Plan B: Estate in Husband's Name Only—Disposed of by His Will under Two-Trust Method
$75,000	tax at husband's death	None		None
	" " wife's "	$1,050		None
	Total		$1,050
100,000	tax at husband's death	None		None
	" " wife's "	4,800		None
	Total		4,800
120,000	tax at husband's death	None		None
	" " wife's "	9,500		None
	Total		9,500
150,000	tax at husband's death	1,050		$1,050
	" " wife's "	17,606		1,050
	Total		18,656		$2,100
200,000	tax at husband's death	4,800		4,800
	" " wife's "	31,260		4,800
	Total		36,060		9,600

	" " wife's "	111,236		47,700
	Total		158,936		95,400
1,060,000	tax at husband's death	136,100		136,100
	" " wife's "	275,343		136,100
	Total		411,443		272,200

NOTE: Tax computations in table above assume that the full marital deduction is allowable and that the wife survives her husband by ten years or longer. No allowance is made for state taxes and administration costs in computing Federal taxes.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

'Who's Who' on H.S.T.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

"Who's Who" has noted, and appreciates your editorial, "H.S.T. as D.C.L., of June 21. It was inspired by the degree conferred on former President Truman at Oxford.

In the case of former Presidents of the United States, "Who's Who" is happy to include all the honorary degrees listed. But H.S.T., like his successor, D.D.E., is a very modest man, and the sketch as it appears in "Who's Who" is exactly as the former President requested it, having been subjected to no blue pencil by our editors.

In fact, during our recent efforts to control the size of "Who's Who" by paring down the length of over-detailed sketches, we have used both Ex-President Truman and President Eisenhower as sterling examples of brevity. You will note that each has a relatively short sketch, which sketches have been kept brief at the volition of the eminent biographees involved and not through action of our editors.

You might also be interested to know that we have had considerable amiable correspondence with the Ex-President concerning his sketch, with the result that it has received special treatment in two respects.

First, he convinced us that the "S" in his name is not an initial but a name, and therefore should not be followed by a period, which it is not, being only followed by a comma in his listing.

Second, he has contended, in opposition to the Congressional Record and other authorities, that he was in actuality the thirty-second President of the United States, not the thirty-third, citing Grover Cleveland's two separate terms as the reason for the alleged incorrect numbering.

Therefore, middle of the road action being such a fashion today, we decided to compromise, and you will note that, even though in the body of the book TRUMAN, Harry S, is listed as the thirty-third President of the United States, there is a note on Page 2999 of the Addendum Section which reads as follows: "TRUMAN, Harry S, thirty-second man to serve as President of the United States, although officially designated thirty-third President."

Faster Than Sound

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

A week ago Monday evening I sent a telegram via Western Union to Route 1, Ironton, Mo. I was telling them that I would arrive on Tuesday forenoon. I arrived, but not the telegram. It came on Wednesday.

Don't you think that farm people are entitled to better service than that? If the service is that bad, Western Union should tell the people not to waste their time and money by sending telegrams to rural areas. LESLIE KONNYU.

Housewife Views Ike

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

As an average housewife I would like to comment on President Eisenhower.

I voted for him in 1952 and soon after he was elected I noticed a definite steadiness in prices at the grocers. Before that time, with President Truman, I would never know what the price of butter, coffee, etc., might be from week to week. The indecision of how to check my pantry to keep within my budget was very upsetting mentally.

The next most important change made by President Eisenhower was the ceasing of the Korean "police action." This, indeed, was a relief to most American minds.

Then I noticed everyday living sort of resembled the pre-World War II days, when everyone seemed to be smiling and the tension was practically gone.

To sum up my findings I can only say that the United States has been on a better basis, mentally, physically and financially since 1952. That means I'm going to vote for Ike again.

I was taught in school as well as in the Marine Corps that every good American should put God first, country second and loved ones next. That is what Mr. Eisenhower is surely doing for us.

Signs of the Times

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The four of us walked casually past two old ladies last Friday. One turned to the other and said, "There they go—typical young hoodlums."

We turned into a drugstore to buy some cigarettes. The two attendants strode up and roughly asked, "Whatta ya want?"

Next, we went to a movie theater where the usher wanted to know if we had a car or "any knives." "Yes," we had a car; "yes," I had a penknife on me. The usher then gently pointed to a sign which "reserved the right" to refuse admittance.

So we went to a playground with lights and played volleyball till 9 o'clock when we were told to "get off." And so to bed for two seminarians and two college men.

TYPICAL HOODLUM.

Security and Liberty, Too

The most important revision in the federal loyalty-security program, recommended in the extensive study by the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, is that the tests apply only to so-called sensitive Government positions. This is in line with the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court. But it disagrees with Attorney General Brownell and some Congressmen who advocate new legislation to set aside the Court's limitation.

The very fact that the lawyers' committee found itself unable to go as far as many would have liked in reconciling personal rights and national security is the strongest of arguments for restricting security proceedings to the areas in which they are necessary, and to those only.

There has been serious concern, for example, about "faceless accusers"—informers whom the agencies concerned are unwilling to bring into a hearing chamber for confrontation and cross-examination. In a courtroom a defendant has this right of cross-examination. Yet this study reached the conclusion that such appearances should be left to the discretion of the agency which is pressing charges. This is a compromise with Anglo-American legal standards. Actual cases show the possibilities for abuse.

There has been no showing of clear and present danger to warrant the subjection of more than 6,183,000 American citizens, half of them in private employment, to the super-judicial risks to which they actually were exposed before the recent Supreme Court ruling.

The New York bar study, financed by a $100,000 grant from the Fund for the Republic, makes many recommendations intended to introduce more fair play into the security picture while still safeguarding the necessary governmental prudence in connection with military, diplomatic and scientific secrets of state. But the study also declares that "to ignore or even to slight liberty would be to destroy our character as a people and as a nation." There is a line beyond which compromise for security's sake becomes self-defeating.

The appointment of a Director of Personnel and Information Security by the President, with the approval of the Senate, is urged. Under this official, security procedures would be made uniform, more exacting standards would be set up for the classification of information as secret, and there would be constant review with the aim of making changes as these become desirable.

A more reasonable standard for the determination of security risks is suggested. Employes would be protected against unwarranted expenses; they would be given more adequate information about charges against them and a better opportunity for explaining these; and, if possible, they would be transferred to non-sensitive positions rather than discharged.

It is a question whether hearing boards should be appointed by the agency making charges against an individual, as recommended in this study. Even if only one employe of the agency serves on such a three-man board, he at least will find himself in the position of prosecutor and judge. In view of the committee's recommendation of special training for security officials, it does seem possible to put the proceedings beyond suspicion of prejudgment. No agency head would start security proceedings unless he believed he had ground to do so.

Other proposed changes include improvement in the rules of procedure, the dropping or reform of the Attorney General's list of suspect organizations and the narrowing of the security field to a reasonable area. These will come close to satisfying the most searching and honest critics of the Eisenhower security program.

As for Congress it has two reasons to be impressed by this report: because of its responsibility for the climate of individual liberty and because it should be eager to eliminate the wasteful expense of continuing a security program that in certain respects actually works against national security.

An Elephant Is Worth 4 Cents

Doubts about the sharpness of House Democrats were heightened when they massed to defeat an amendment—offered by one of their own number—which would have put a G.O.P. elephant on new four-cent stamps, the first-class mail rate called for in the House-approved bill boosting postal rates by $430,100,100.

It is possible that the Senate will send the measure to the dead-letter office. Nevertheless we are disappointed that the House Democrats blocked this fine gesture of respect for the opposition in a campaign year.

More seriously, the penny increase on letters, the only category of mail on which the Post Office has been making money, would bring in about $295,700,000 or something less than three-quarters of the total increase. By contrast the second-class rate on magazines would be increased only $44,500,000 over five years. The minimum rate would be moved from ⅛ to ¼ cent. And the rate on so-called "junk" mail would be raised from 10 cents to 12 cents the pound or from 1½ to 2 cents on individual pieces. How does the postman feel about delivering a publication of 100 big pages or more for a quarter of a penny while modest little letters carry four-cent stamps?

Those not carrying his load, however, might have refrained from complaints if the Democrats had sanctioned the elephant on the new stamp. They might have been more gallant toward their Republican colleagues, consoling themselves with the thought that one of these days they might authorize a donkey-stamp.

Airliners and Pilot Vision

When William K. Andrews, director of the Civil Aeronautics Board safety investigation division, told a House subcommittee investigating the collision of two airliners over Arizona that "TWA had full responsibility for maintaining separation" from other air traffic, he certainly did not go out of his way to give the Congressmen the full picture of the situation.

He might also have pointed out that the modern commercial airliner gives the pilot little more view than is absolutely necessary to take a plane off and land it—a matter definitely in the jurisdiction of the safety division. It is impossible in present cockpits for the pilot to see to the rear, above or below his plane. Only by moving his face close to the windshield can he see more than a thin ribbon of sky either forward or to the sides. Even then vision in these directions is sharply limited.

How, then, could the pilot of the Super Constellation see the faster DC-7 overtaking him from the rear if that is what happened? And, for that matter, unless the two planes were at almost exactly the same altitude and on the same course for some time, how could the pilot of the DC-7 reasonably be expected to see the other plane?

It is too early to toss the matter off as probably the result of pilot error. There is no question that it is the primary responsibility of the pilots to prevent collisions if weather conditions permit them to see other planes, regardless of what type flight plan they are operating on. And it might be noted that they are betting their own lives on their vigilance, as well as those of their passengers.

But the overriding responsibility for air safety is on the Government agencies. They ought to help pilots by notifying all planes, as a matter of course, of other air traffic in their immediate vicinity. This ought to be the case whether or not there is a change in flight plans since schedules may be altered without a formal change in flight plans.

As for visibility, it is long since past time for the Government to stop certificating airliners with vision so restricted that it would not be countenanced in automobiles.

Public Needs Are Paramount

One by one the steps under the King-Thompson Act are being taken by the State of Missouri in the Laclede Gas Co. strike. First, Gov. Donnelly seized the company. Now Attorney General Dalton has filed suit in Circuit Court in St. Louis to enjoin the strike. Next Circuit Judge Holt passes on the injunction. The prospect is that penalties against the AFL-CIO Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union will soon be in force.

Meantime the number of homes and businesses lacking gas service is growing steadily. An increase of some 3000 gasless consumers over the weekend has brought the total to some 18,000 to 20,000. Many homes that are dependent on gas for cooking and heating water no longer have the services which they need.

The company and its union are obligated to conduct their relationships in such a way as to avoid breakdowns of this sort. The company manages a public utility, the workers help serve its public. Each gives up something as the King-Thompson Act recognizes.

In the nature of things a public utility is different from an activity with little or no public connection. A strike against a public utility is a strike against the public which uses the service as well as against the company which provides it.

This dispute will be settled at the conference table. Since that will be its solution, the strikers will only help their case by going back to work. They are now in defiance of the law in Missouri. If they ignore an injunction, they will be in defiance of an order of the Circuit Court of the State.

All these developments distract attention from the disputed points in the negotiations. Genuine bargainers seeking a solution ought to be able to find a common ground. Meanwhile let the public utility function as a public utility.

They Can't Live on Peanuts

In an effort to be fair all around, the Pacific Coast Conference has now fined Southern California and California Universities $62,000 and $25,000, in effect, for violations of the athletic code. Earlier fines against other schools for "under-the-table" aid raised such an outcry from their uncheering sections that practically every school in the P.C.C. has now been penalized.

These are stiff fines, in the football business. Southern California's payment would come close to supporting a good football team for one year. That is, the University of Oklahoma reports that its 80 football scholarships cost $750 each a year, and if the Sooners can turn out champions for so little, why couldn't U.S.C.? But Southern Cal has been banned from playing in the Rose Bowl for two years, so it will not need a champion until 1958, anyway.

The Pacific Coast difficulties show how different rules can be for paying athletes. On the Coast, a halfback is allowed tuition and fees, plus campus employment paying no more than $100 a month. This figure was recently raised from $75, but even now there is some doubt that a football player can live on it. One U.C.L.A. guard frankly reported a monthly budget at $147.66, including one haircut, and said if he got any less he would have to quit school or football.

Other conferences pay off in different ways. Most of them allow "B.R.T. plus," which means board, room and tuition, plus a job with a salary limit. But whatever their rules are, they all seem to have trouble enforcing them (except perhaps the Ivy League, which simply bans athletic scholarships). It is not just that it is difficult to be amateur while paying students to play ball. The real trick is to win without paying too much too obviously.

Benefit for the Schools

The St. Louis School Board has wisely decided to ask the voters for authority to liquidate its permanent fund, a kind of endowment tracing back to the days of land-grants to the schools. Such action might produce the not inconsiderable sum of $5,000,000 in windfall capital.

Currently the fund consists of about $3,500,000 in Government securities and three pieces of real estate, the most important of which is the Board's own seven-story headquarters at 911 Locust street. The building suffers from a lack of parking facilities, and this has helped isolate the instruction department from its clients, the teachers, the children and their parents.

If St. Louisans approve the liquidation of the fund, which produces annual earnings of about $155,000, the Board presumably will sell the headquarters and move west to a more suitable place. This will put the building on the tax rolls. A portion of the capital freed when the fund is closed out probably will have to be set aside for construction of a new Board building. The rest can be used for one or more new school buildings.

The Board has still to set a date for the election on this matter, as well as to spell out specifically how it would employ the capital thus made available. Surely the proposal is likely to meet with a more favorable response at the polls if the people know in advance exactly where the money would go. A prudent Board would see that they do know, and in detail.

Old Enough to Drive?

State Senator John B. Barrett says he will propose an age limit of 17 years for motorists in Missouri. Most states with heavy traffic have higher age limits for drivers than this state. And Senator Barrett's proposal makes much more sense than earlier suggestions than 16-year-old drivers be classified as adults.

The legal line between juveniles and adults has to be drawn somewhere, and it should not be broken simply for traffic cases. That would violate the whole conception of the juvenile code. But if a youth is not considered old enough to face the responsibilities of an adult under the law, he is not old enough to drive. The Barrett proposal would permit equal treatment of all drivers in traffic courts.

A Political Standard for Art?

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Federal Information Agency canceled American art tour in Australia because of charges that some of artists represented had had Communist-front associations; two editorials denounce this timidity; ask if we want totalitarian political tests for art?

The New York Times

The United States Information Agency, which is supposed to help foreigners understand what America is all about, seems once again to have been bullied into a position that gives a false and distorted picture of our country that could rejoice only the hearts of our enemies.

A few weeks ago it was revealed that the USIA had canceled plans to send to Australia an exhibition of American paintings on the subject of sports, because one group of fanatic extremists had claimed that some of the artists represented had had Communist-front associations.

Theodore Streibert

This time a much more comprehensive exhibition is involved. A collection of close to 100 paintings covering all styles of contemporary American art was being assembled for display under USIA auspices in several European countries next fall and winter. The USIA has indicated it may withdraw its sponsorship because some of the artists do not pass its political test.

The American Federation of Arts, which is gathering the show together, refuses to exclude their work on such grounds. "Art," says the federation's trustees, "should be judged on its merits . . . and not by the political or social views of the artist."

Afraid of Congressmen?

Presumably what the USIA is afraid of is not the subversive effect of the paintings, because there is none, but the inflammatory effect on a few Congressmen that official American sponsorship of these paintings might induce. Since the USIA is dependent on Congress for the more than $100,000,000 it will expend in the coming year, it doesn't want to alienate anybody. But it is paying a stiff price.

In the instances cited, and they are not the only ones, the USIA is implying that art must undergo a test of the political legitimacy of the artist. The State Department has on occasion acted similarly.

This is uncomfortably close to the Nazi and the Communist concept, which is diametrically opposed to the basic philosophy of free American culture.

The Des Moines Register

How do you judge a work of art? Do you judge it on its merits or on the basis of the artist's politics?

In a freedom-loving country the answer would seem obvious. The very idea is barbarous that a work of art is "unacceptable" because someone says the artist had wrong ideas about politics.

Yet that is what the United States Information Agency is insisting upon.

Theodore Streibert, the information agency director, felt it necessary to make concessions to this distorted standard of art and literature during the brief reign of terror by Senator Joseph McCarthy (Rep.), Wisconsin.

When McCarthyism became a "wasm" Streibert made fine new resolutions and a good start in practice. Yet in several recent instances he has slipped back into the jellyfish role.

The worst instance involves the proposed traveling exhibit of major paintings of 100 American artists of the twentieth century. The United States agency turned over selection of the paintings (very sensibly) to the respected private American Federation of Arts, which has a standing policy that "art should be judged on its merits and not on the social views of the artist."

The federation picked two distinguished museum officials to make the actual selections. They went to a lot of trouble and picked noted artists of many different styles.

Art Is What Counts

It would be very surprising if such a collection did not include the work of artists with unorthodox political ideas or associations. We should expect, for example, that some of them might have flirted with Communism, some with anarchism. Some might think the whole machine age was a mistake, some that anything pre-machine-age was corny.

So what? A painting is not a discourse on politics or economics. The painting is what counts. The painter won't travel with the show.

But no, the USIA found 10 of the 100 artists politically "unacceptable." The federation's trustees voted unanimously not to take part in the show if the Government imposed political tests.

Thus what might have been a dignified and interesting demonstration that America does after all have some culture becomes another weapon for propagandists that culture doesn't have a chance here. It also provides proof to foreigners that we don't live up to our own principles of cultural freedom.

Peaceful Competition With Russia

From the Oceanside (Calif.) Blade-Tribune

Some 35,000 people—there were 70,000 empty seats—watched the nation's top track and field athletes on each of two days compete for the United States Olympic team at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum. We'll bet that at some time during that two-day event most of the spectators and all of the athletes wondered how they would stack up against Russia.

We noted in our program that the U.S. team will be competing in Southern California meets between the time of its assembly at Los Angeles, approximately Oct. 15, and its departure for Melbourne on Nov. 5. It occurs to us that the greatest dual meet of all time might be staged at the Coliseum during that 21-day period. It would be a dual meet that would give our team the kind of training it will need for the Olympics. It might even lend a hand to our foreign policy. Why doesn't the Olympic committee invite the Russians to fly here for a dual meet en route to Australia?

As for foreign policy, we think such an invitation would mean far more to the average man in this world than the Russians' recent invitation to Gen. Twining. A friendly competition between Russia and the United States on the athletic field is the kind of contest between the two nations the whole world would enjoy.

Suppose the Russians win? Well, suppose you're a Russian. Then suppose the Americans win? The loser would have the consolation of knowing that he'd have another chance in Australia. The whole world's interest in the Olympics would be whetted.

Suppose we extend an invitation and the Russians refuse? Our gesture can't help but appear to the eyes of the world as the friendly and hospitable gesture that it would be. The world liked our invitation to Russian farmers. It would pay even more attention to a bid to Russian athletes.

And as for those 70,000 empty seats? There wouldn't be standing room for a gnat that day in the Coliseum.

Between Book Ends

Retreating Humanity

THE TORTURED EARTH, by Gert Ledig. (Henry Regnery Co., 219 pgs., $3.75.)

Gen. William T. Sherman's simple observation that "War is Hell" has been developed by Gert Ledig into a literary masterpiece that strips armed conflict of all glamour and depicts human participants as miserable creatures devoid of ideals and incapable of thinking of anything except their own skins.

The misery described by Ledig in his story of a Russian breakthrough of German lines at Leningrad in World War II is more abject and terrible than the misery witnessed by the Soul of Man in Dante's Inferno. "The Tortured Earth" has no light moments. It is 219 pages of uninterrupted agony.

Gert Ledig

In "The Divine Comedy," Dante left the reader with hope and a promise of salvation. But Ledig does not permit such a light to shine. A glimmer of hope sparks faintly in the Epilogue, but it is overshadowed by doubt.

The major and the sergeant, who have survived the breakthrough, become impatient while attending a mass burial service for their fallen comrades. They start to leave as the priest is saying, "Only when we have returned to ashes will He come and say 'There will be light' and this is our consolation. . ."

"You mustn't think I'm particularly pleased to leave that service," the sergeant says, as they walk away. "It rings so pleasantly in your ears. It's something different. Besides . . . secretly we all hope it's true."

"Yes," replied the major. "It would be unthinkable if that were a lie too."

So the book ends. It opens on a gruesome note—a detailed description of the death of a German corporal, whose body is thrown into the air by a salvo of rockets, torn apart by successive blasts of machine gun fire—and finally flattened by a Russian tank.

The central characters of the story are German soldiers who have been reduced to the level of bestiality by nerve-wracking days in the blood and filth of a demoralized front line.

The blind retreat of the Germans reaches a climax when fear-crazed men fight each other with fists and bayonets for space on railroad cars standing on a siding. The cars are going nowhere. They are uncoupled and their locomotives long since knocked out of action.

"The Tortured Earth" is a moving book, both brutal and sensitive. German critics hailed it as the best book of World War II. It may well serve the same purpose as "All Quiet on the Western Front." If only people of this generation and the next would heed its message! CARL. R. BALDWIN.

Not What He Wanted

PALE MOON, by W. R. Burnett. (Knopf, 276 pgs., $3.50.)

Doan Packer goes to the town of San Miguel in search of health and peace, but he encounters instead the ruthlessness and savagery of Jake Starr, wealthy ranch owner and politician who runs the town. Doan is disillusioned until he meets Jake's daughter Opal. The big, passive Southerner and the impulsive, stubborn daughter of Jake are attracted to each other. After Jake is murdered, Opal turns to Doan to help her run the estate and town.

A subtle struggle ensues when Opal tries to run Doan's life. Doan proceeds to put the wilful little lady in her place. Packer then runs for mayor of the town, but politics gets dirty when Bob Martin, the opposition candidate, distributes handbills containing some facts about Packer's past life. The story reaches a climax when Bob Martin is killed and a search is started for the murderers.

Mr. Burnett has a good story to tell and tells it well.

WASHINGTON.

IT IS WORTH WHILE to take a good, second look at the defeat administered by the House of Representatives last weekend for federal aid for school construction. For it offers a mirror whereby we may see something of ourselves in this particular period—of our values and our standards and of our political leadership.

This last, our political leadership, was revealed to be barren, inept and short-sighted in the sorry performance which killed the school bill for this Congress—and that goes for the leadership embodied both in the Democratic party which controls Congress and in the Republican party which controls the executive branch of our Government. The pell-mell rush of Republicans to vote against the measure on final passage, deserting the Eisenhower Administration, indicated a weakness in White House leadership which may reflect the relaxation on the reins due to the President's illness.

Stokes

Roads but Not Schools.

Is there a commentary on our evaluation of what is important, of our standards, in this fiasco on the school bill in the House as contrasted with what happened on another measure a few weeks ago?

To wit, Congress voted 26.6 billion dollars of Federal money for highway construction, with the states to provide approximately 4.6 billions for a total of about 31.3 billions; and now the House refuses 1.6 billions for schools to educate our next generation for a world that demands more and better education if we are to compete and survive in this age of science.

We spend federal money to build roads to schools, but begrudge it in a comparatively meager sum to build decent schoolhouses along those same roads. We do indeed get confused in our thinking. There are other issues, too, which were allowed to complicate the school bill.

Profit in Highways.

One was integration. There is, of course, no segregation about highways. Negroes can use them the same as whites. But with schools it's different so far as Southern states are concerned.

For another thing, industry, which speaks with a much more powerful voice in Congress than do our educators, will reap profitable business from the building of roads planned under the highway program.

Under that pressure Congress worked much harder to iron out differences over the highway bill than did anybody in Congress to try to reach a solution for the school construction measure.

It seems to be a matter of emphasis today. We are obviously in a materialistic era—and a sign is what happened about highways and schools.

There was a mixture of motives in the House fight which combined to defeat the school construction measure. It produced the sort of combination which was outlined as a probable outcome in this column a few days ago if the integration issue became involved.

Northern Republicans, principally from the Midwest, who are against federal aid to school construction on principle, joined Southern Democrats who are adamantly opposed to any attempt to enforce school integration by withholding of federal funds, and some opposed as well to federal aid.

President's Failure.

The integration issue was injected through the amendment by a Northern Democrat, a Negro, Representative Adam Clayton Powell of New York. It would have barred federal money to states which failed to comply with the Supreme Court public school integration decision.

President Eisenhower had criticized this in a news conference weeks ago as "extraneous" and having no place in this legislation, but he neglected to follow through and give orders to his party leaders to oppose the Powell amendment, which he could have done, thus abdicating his leadership.

Democratic leaders were unable to solve their own dilemma and dissuade Representative Powell from pressing the issue. When it was inserted in the bill, then Southern Democrats voted solidly against the measure.

G.O.P. Plays Politics.

This embarrassment for the Democrats, revealing the open split in their party between North and South in this election year over civil rights, was a part of Republican political strategy. As party leaders were conscious, it also played into the hands of those Republicans determined to defeat the bill.

This was manifest in the swarm of Republicans who voted for the Powell amendment, 148, many of whom then turned around and voted to kill the bill. There were 119 Republican votes against the measure, 61 per cent of Republicans who were recorded on the final vote.

Only 39 per cent of those who voted—75—supported their Administration. Fifty-three per cent of Democrats who were recorded—119—voted for the bill. Forty-seven per cent—105—voted against it, all but one from the South.

It was a political potpourri from which the public suffers, but was so confused—and by design—that it is impossible for the voter to unscramble it and fix the blame.

"The Great Waltz," which was given its sixth production by Municipal Opera last night, again proved the occasion for a lush outpouring of melody, beautifully sung, as the exuberant, surging waltzes of Johann Strauss Jr. were contrasted with the statlier, more delicate waltzes of his father, Johann Sr. In the point of music, the work was the perfect operetta for last night's perfect summer evening; the flow of lilting, infectious sound laved the sensory faculties of the crowd of 8000 as exhilaratingly as did the cool, balmy air.

The musical's book is not up to its tunes, illogically so, in that it was written by the eminent playwright, Moss Hart. Mr. Hart's play is literate, but rather stiff. It has one strong scene in the bitter quarrel between the jealous elder Strauss and the resentful son whose composing career the father is seeking to suppress. But it leans rather heavily on the clumsy device of having the father tricked into leaving his concert so the son can take his place and make his Vienna debut, and on slightly shopworn standard operetta minor characters. It nowhere manages to convey the spirit of gay Vienna that the music does; nor does its love story achieve even nearly that almost poignant sweetness of the younger Strauss's more feeling waltzes. I couldn't understand enough of Desmond Carter's lyrics last night — articulation wasn't a strong point—to give a decent opinion of them, but nothing of a poetic or evocative nature came through.

But the story served at least for a conveyance for the delightful music, which poured forth in rich profusion in duets between Schani (Johann Jr.) and his girl, Resi, the daughter of a pastry-shop owner, and between him and his patroness, the Countess Baranskaja. As Schani, Theodor Uppman had a warm, sensitive and fluent baritone, and as Resi, Peggy Bonini used a strong, translucent soprano effectively. Their duets, "You Are My Songs," "Love Will Find You," and the haunting, "With All My Heart," were capped by the achingly lovely, "While You Love Me," in which an ending sung piano is topped by the soprano's delicate high climactic note.

As the Countess, Claramae Turner supplied an authoritative acting performance and striking looks as a brilliant and assertive woman of the world. Her contralto is beautifully produced and tonally opulent, and her singing of "Like a Star in the Sky" with Uppman and "For We Love Still," were two of the high points of the evening.

As the elder Strauss, George Gaynes gave a polished and forceful performance. It's too bad his fine baritone singing voice had to be wasted, but the score provides no excuse to bring it into play. I think there could have been more development of Muriel O'Malley's opening song, "Tales from the Vienna Woods," because it is the epitome of all the champagne flavor of Strauss, fils, but it was cut short.

A ballet in white which opened the second act gave off an aura of fragile moonlit enchantment, particularly in the fastidiously exact technique and allusive artistry of the always excellent Patricia Bowman. The fireworks display was a blaze of glory—it simply had to be after a buildup all evening by Oliver Cliff as an impresario mad about pyrotechnics. And the climactic playing of "On the Beautiful Blue Danube," with the orchestra on the stage was as effervescent and stirring as it should have been.

ST. LOUISAN'S ART EXHIBITED IN PARIS

Paintings of Cynthia Bloom, Fulbright Scholar, Are Hung in Gallery.

An exhibition of paintings by Cynthia Bloom, St. Louis artist who went to Europe on a Fulbright scholarship in 1954, is on view this month at the Gallery de Beaune in Paris, France.

Miss Bloom, 23 years old, was graduated in 1954 from the Washington University School of Fine Arts. Her oil painting, "City Fantasy," won a $100 prize in City Art Museum's Missouri Show of that year.

The artist, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bloom, 7252 Stanford avenue, University City, visited Spain, Italy and other European countries in addition to France. She studied for a year at the Sorbonne in Paris.

A program of Miss Bloom's current exhibition indicates the paintings are principally gouaches. Her mother said Miss Bloom planned to return to St. Louis next month.

MRS. AMELIA T. M'CULLEN DIES, WAS WIDOW OF JUDGE

Mrs. Amelia T. McCullen, wife of the late Judge Edward J. McCullen who served about 20 years in the city Court of Appeals, died today at her home, 7365 Melrose avenue, University City. She was 76 years old and had suffered many years from Parkinson's disease.

Judge McCullen died two years ago after retiring from the court in 1951. Mrs. McCullen is survived by a son, Richard E. McCullen of University City; a daughter, Mrs. Viola McCullen Stratton of Miami; two grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, two sisters and a brother.

Funeral services will be at 10 a.m. Thursday at the Lupton undertaking establishment, 7233 Delmar boulevard, University City. Burial will be in Oak Grove Cemetery.

CHARLES W. BERNHARD SR. DIES, OWNED DRAYAGE FIRM

Charles W. Bernhard Sr., president and owner of the Bernhard Drayage Co. Inc., 2659 La Salle street, died yesterday of a heart ailment at Alexian Brothers Hospital. He was 71 years old.

Mr. Bernhard had been in the drayage business for more than 40 years and headed his own company since 1946. Previously, he had been a partner in the Bernhard-Behan Drayage Co. He lived at 9417 Koerber lane, Affton.

Survivors include his wife, of the Koerber lane address; a son, Charles W. Bernhard Jr.; three daughters, Mrs. Vernon Dunnegan, Mrs. John Dunnegan and Miss Madonna Bernhard; a brother, a sister and four grandchildren. Funeral services will be Thursday at Seven Holy Founders Church, 6727 Rock Hill road, Affton, with burial in SS. Peter and Paul Cemetery.

TURNS DOWN PERMIT FOR TEMPLE ISRAEL

Creve Coeur Board Refuses to Allow Chapel Construction.

The Creve Coeur Board of Aldermen last night refused to grant a special permit to allow construction of a Temple Israel chapel on the northeast corner of Spoede and Ladue roads.

A motion by Alderman Edward J. Wirt of the Second Ward to grant the permit died when it failed to receive a second from the four-member board. Wirt made his motion after a 90-minute executive session.

The board received last night a unanimous recommendation from the city's Planning and Zoning Board for rejection of the application.

The planning board said additional traffic congestion would result on Ladue road. It also cited the fact that objections to the permit had been registered by more than 30 per cent of property owners living within 1000 feet of the proposed site.

Under an amendment to the city's zoning ordinance, a three-fourths vote of the Board of Aldermen is needed to issue a building permit for churches and other institutions if more than 10 per cent of the property owners within the 1000-foot radius object. That amendment was adopted in June 1954 shortly after Temple Israel purchased the Creve Coeur site.

At that time city officials denied that the congregation's plans for a chapel and Sunday school building had anything to do with adoption of the amendment. Last night the plan board pointed out that a permit for a church of another faith at the southwest corner of Ladue and Spoede roads also had been rejected.

Officers of Temple Israel in the past have called the zoning amendment discriminatory and said they were ready to fight the measure in court, if necessary.

In March 1954 an application by Temple Israel for a special permit to build on a site near Clayton and Warson roads, Ladue, was rejected by the Ladue City Council.

Temple Israel is at Kingshighway and Washington boulevard, but spokesmen have said 70 per cent of the congregation now lives in St. Louis county.

THE REV. ARTHUR KUEHNERT RETIRES FROM PASTORATE

The Rev. Arthur M. Kuehnert has announced his retirement after 35 years as pastor of Ebenezer Evangelical Lutheran Church, Church road and Theobald avenue, Baden. He becomes pastor emeritus.

Under his pastorate the church has increased its membership several times, now totaling 1300. Its one-room schoolhouse has been turned into a building with 220 students.

The Rev. Kuehnert was graduated from Concordia Seminary in 1912. He and his wife live at 1140 Hornsby avenue.

Cold Touch Added to Summer Training of Missouri Guard

By THEODORE P. WAGNER
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CAMP WILLIAMS, Wis., July 10 — Hudson Bay weather, sweeping into Wisconsin on 25-mile-an-hour winds, added a cold touch to the "summer" training program of the 1700 Missouri Air Guard members encamped here.

Temperatures drop to 50 degrees at night and rise slowly to 65 in daylight hours. The B-26 pilots, flying gunnery and navigation missions, wear fur flying jackets. Ground crew members, exposed to the full blast of the wind on the far-flung landing strip, pull up the hoods of their parka-type jackets. Gloves and sweaters also have appeared.

Training directors set a fast pace today, as the customary problems of the first days in camp began to be ironed out. The problem of no landing lights for night landings, for example, was solved by lining the runways with flares such as contractors use to mark excavations.

Other flying activities today include air-to-ground gunnery, Norden bombing, formation flying and navigation by Shoran.

Shoran training, highly specialized, has taken 20 bomber-navigators of the 131st wing away from here. Flying in a specially equipped C-47 transport plane, the students are working out of Scott Air Force Base, Belleville, this week. They will return here next week to work with their units.

This training requires the Shoran operators to fix positions by radar when flying at various points of a triangle formed by Scott Base, Blytheville (Ark.) Air Force Base, and Bunker, Mo., near Salem. Knowing the distance to a target and its altitude, the expert Shoran bombardier is expected to bomb through cloud cover to within 25 feet of the center of the target.

For the ground elements two schools are in progress. The first, for 200 basic airmen from the St. Louis, St. Joseph and New Orleans squadrons, starts the young recruit on the path to becoming a full-fledged airman.

In camp, under the direction of Maj. Robert H. Barron, 8611 Scudder Road, Berkeley, the 17- to 20-year-old recruits fire their first military weapons on the carbine range, learn military customs and courtesies, organization of the Air Force and other basic subjects. The schooling continues following their return to home stations, with graduation about one year hence.

For the non-commissioned officers of the wing there is a school in on-the-job training. The instructor, L. M. Mazon, a civilian Air Force instructor with degrees from three universities, instructs the non-coms in putting across such training to their men at armory drill. The training, function of the Air Training Command, covers all Air Force career fields, from repairing an engine to administration procedure. Expertly prepared manuals cover each subject.

Nine members of another group departed by plane today for 10 days at Selfridge Air Force Base, Mich., for cryptographic training, the science of secret communication. Included were three members of the 110th Squadron, Lambert-St. Louis field. They are: Airman Second Class Charles S. Schneider, 1336 Laurel Avenue; Airman Third Class Lloyd L. Hauther, 6400 Bartmer avenue, and Airman Third Class Robert L. Schneider, Pacific, Mo.

Observing the training here are: Brig. Gen. John Strauss, assistant adjutant general of Missouri, advisor for the 110th Squadron, and Col. Ross Garlich, air administrative assistant to the adjutant general. Later in the program, inspection teams from the Tenth Air Force Tactical Air Force, Continental Air Force and the National Guard Bureau will grade the training effort.

60TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Scharf Sr., 5621 Winona avenue, tomorrow will observe their sixtieth wedding anniversary. The pair, married in St. Louis, celebrated the anniversary at a surprise family gathering July 1.

Scharf, 82 years old, is president of Scharf Brothers Tobacco Co. His wife, 80, is the former Alice Beile. They have two sons, John W. Jr. and Irvin A. Scharf; two daughters, Mrs. Ethel Horrell and Mrs. Edward Aufderheide; eight grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

NATIONALS BEAT AMERICANS, 7-3; MUSIAL GETS HOMER

MAYS, WILLIAMS AND MANTLE ALSO HIT FOUR-BAGGERS; THREE BLOWS FOR BOYER

By Bob Broeg
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

WASHINGTO, July 10—The ridiculed Cincinnati Redlegs in the softball uniforms, aided handsomely by Ken Boyer and Stan Musial and two members of the New York Giants, today enabled the National League to knock off the favored American League again in the annual All-Star game, 7 to 3.

Before a capacity 28,843 crowd in litele Griffith Stadium, the Nationals achieved their sixth victory in the last seven inter-league mid-summer classics and cut to three their deficit in this annual July interlude that began as a sideshow at the Chicago World's Fair in 1933. The American League now has won 13 games, the National 10.

The outcry against nominating five Cincinnati players to the starting lineup and eight to the National League squad was stilled as the play of three Redlegs—Roy McMillan, Johnny Temple and Ted Kluszewski—combined with the efforts of old pro Musial, young one Boyer and slugging Willie Mays and lefthander Johnny Antonelli of the Giants to produce the senior circuit triumph.

Boyer Sparkles.

The most spectacular performer in the game undoubtedly was Boyer, the husky sophomore St. Louis third baseman who contributed three of the Nationals' 11 hits and the game's two top plays, a diving stop to his left and another to his right.

Musial, slightly injured near the end of his thirteenth All-Star game, quickly added a record fifth homer after a long-time rival, Ted Williams, had tied Stan the Man's previous mark in the one inning—the sixth—when Americans made their only threat.

Five of the 11 American League hits were crammed in that one inning in which Williams and Mickey Mantle hit successive homers off Warren Spahn, stylish Milwaukee southpaw. Before and after, however, the junior circuit, a 7-5 choice of the professional handicappers, failed to threaten.

Bob Friend, Pittsburgh's right-handed collegian, limited the A.L. to three hits the first three innings and Antonelli, taking over in the sixth, went the final four frames during which he yielded four hits. The first two batters to oppose him hit safely, putting the potential tying runs on base, but the Giant lefthander eased out of trouble then and breezed home.

The three National League pitchers did not walk a batter while six American hurlers fanned 12, but, obviously, lacked the same over-all effectiveness. Starter and loser Billy Pierce, Ed (Whitey) Ford, Jim Wilson and Tom Brewer all were scored on. Only Herb Score and Early Wynn, Cleveland teammates, were undamaged in a game in which Mays' two-run pinch homer in the fourth seemed to spark the N.L. victory.

38 Players Used.

Manager Walter Alston of the Nationals used only 17 players to 21 employed by Casey Stengel and he permitted three to go the distance—Boyer and the clever double-play combination of Temple and McMillan. Temple, hitting safely twice and walking once, drove in the first National League run and touched off a run-scoring inning. McMillan singled twice and walked while Kluszewski, entering the game as a pinch-batter and then staying in, whacked two doubles to score one run and drive in another.

Opening the game, Pierce was overwhelming. The white-uniformed White Sox lefthander, author of brilliant All-Star performances in 1953 and '55, opened with a curved called strike to Temple, a punch-hitting right-handed batter. That set the tempo for the inning. Temple, fooled so badly on a third strike, threw his bat as he fanned. Pierce curved Rookie Robinson once, then blew two fast balls past the kid, who went out swinging. Player-of-the-decade Musial, drawing the biggest hand so far, hit the first pitch on the ground to Kuenn at shortstop.

To begin the American League's first time at bat, Friend threw a called strike to Kuenn. The next pitch missed. Harvey hit the third one, sending a sharp line drive to Boyer's right. The Cardinal third baseman brought a round of applause and a roar as he dove and speared the ball. It was a first-rate fielding play.

Next up, Fox, choke-grip left-handed hitter, slapped a soft grounder to Temple at second base. The lean powerful Williams, always an impressive figure, was greeted warmly. The count ran to "2 and 2," at which point Friend broke a half-speed curve in and down—Ted missed it for strike three.

Boyer, getting an appreciative greeting from the crowd, responded as leadoff man in the Nationals' second inning, lining Pierce's first pitch into center field for the first hit of the game. Pierce still was in command though. He induced Bell to chase two curves high and tight before Gus went down swinging. Long, the slumping Pittsburgh slugger and another lefthanded hitter, was fooled and backed away from a third strike, called. With Bailey batting, Boyer broke for second. The batter swung and missed and the run-and-hit play went awry as Berra's throw to Kuenn easily nailed the sliding Redbird.

Single for Yogi.

The crowd "oohed" in the home second as Friend drifted a change-up past the mighty Mantle, then cheered a well-controlled fast ball down at the knees for a called third strike on the switch-hitting Yankee slugger. Berra, the perennial bad ball hitter, reached out and cuffed a hot one past McMillan for a ground single to left. Kaline lifted a first-pitch directly at Bell in medium center field. Vernon, a former Washington favorite now with the Red Sox, was given a handsome hand, but with Friend changing speeds on his fast ball and curve, a quick one sneaked up on Mickey, who barely swung in time, it seemed, to keep the ball out of the catcher's glove. The result was a short fly Bell momentarily misjudged, then caught in shallow left-center.

The National League third began with Bailey, the fourth left-handed hitter, carrying Pierce to his first full count before upercutting a pitch on which he fouled out to Vernon at first base. Pierce's control faltered with McMillan batting and on seven pitches, one of which he fouled off, the slender Cincinnati shortstop walked. Friend sacrificed, Pierce to Fox, and the American League pitcher almost pulled his second base teammate off first with a high throw.

Unexpectedly, the way the crowd reacted, the National League had a run, its first off Pierce in nine All-Star innings. Temple, twice fouling off pitches on which he tried to check his swing, had a "2-1" count when he timed a curve and lined it to right-center for a single, Hutchinson waving McMillan around with a run. Pierce finished with a flourish, however, fanning Robinson a second time. He struck out five during his three innings on the mound.

The Americans' third inning opened excitedly when Kell lined a "2-0" pitch to deep left, where Robinson backed almost to the wall, almost leaped, then decided he didn't have to and made the catch. Batting for Pierce, Harry (Suitcase) Simpson, long slender Kansas City outfielder, struck out as Friend fed him curves breaking in toward his fists.

Kuenn, finding a hole this time, grounded a single sharply between Boyer and McMillan. Little Fox reached out, punched another base hit in the same territory, Kuenn halting at second. And the crowd buzzed in anticipation as Williams came up. Friend, however, rose to the test. On "2 and 2" he broke off a curve Ted topped and rolled harmlessly to Long, ending a three-inning scoreless stint in which the round-faced Pittsburgh righthander yielded three singles.

Ford, the blond Yankee southpaw, took over in the fourth as Stengel followed up his pregame hint that he might lean heavily on lefthanders against a National League lineup that had even more lefthanded strength on the bench than on the field.

Wonderful Willie.

Musial, first up in the fourth, hung in there against Ford's wicked assortment until Whitey broke off a terrific curve Stan took, completely fooled, for a third strike. Boyer, however, found the curve breaking into a righthanded hitter and skipped it past Kuenn for a ground single to left. Now, Alston began to call on his manpower. Rather than have the lefthanded-hitting Bell face the clever southpaw, he called on Mays to pinch-bat. Willie, greeted enthusiastically, took a roundhouse swing at a curve and missed. He didn't miss on the next one, though. It appeared to be a fast ball that went high and far into the towering bleachers for a two-run homer.

Ford struck out Long, but he walked Bailey and as he fell behind McMillan, there was a familiar cry, "Take him out." On a full-count Bailey broke for second and as Kuenn leaned to his left to cover, McMillan grounded a single through the shortstop's position. Baltimore's Jim Wilson was warming up in the American League bullpen as the Cardinals' Rip Repulski batted for Friend. Rip ended the productive inning with a foul to Berra.

Mays went to center field and Spahn pitched for the National in the American League's fourth inning. The audience approved the craftmanship as Spahn, pulling the string against Mantle, with the slugger batting righthanded, struck out the Yankee star. Berra, catching Spahn swung around in his follow-through, bounced a single over the middle. Kaline flied softly to Mays. Vernon skipped a grounder far to Temple's right, but the nimble Cincinnati second baseman ranged rapidly, backhanded the ball and flipped to teammate McMillan for a force play that drew appropriate applause.

For the Americans, Wilson, the well-traveled former National Leaguer, pitched the fifth. He was greeted by Temple's well-placed safe bunt along the third base line. Snider, the rangy Dodger slugger, batted for Robinson against the right-hander and flied to Williams. Musial smashed what seemed a ball jeaded for center field, but Wilson knocked it down and threw out Stan. Temple, however, now was in scoring position and he tallied, making it 4-0, when Boyer blooped a fly ball single to short right-center. Mays took a called third strike.

The umpires and Nationals did some switching in the last of the fifth. Pinelli called balls and strikes, Hurley moved to first base, Gore to second and Berry took off the mask and protector to officiate at third. For the National League, Musial moved to left field, Mays switched to right and Snider entered the outfield in center.

Crowd Cheers Boyer.

With the help of Boyer, Spahn breezed through the American League in the fifth inning. Kell grounded to sure-handed McMillan. The Yankees' Billy Martin, batting for Wilson stepped up, seeming to guess a slow curve, and cuffed it sharply to McMillan. Kuenn then hit a hot grounder between Boyer and third base, but the big guy flung himself to his right, gloved the ball, leaped to his feet and threw out the harassed Detroit shortstop as the crowd cheered.

Pitching for the Americans in the sixth was Boston's Brewer and the Red Sox righthander and batterymate Berra had trouble. First, Yogi's throwing hand was hit painfully with a foul tip. Kluszewski batted for Long and, though he seldom hits to left field, Big Klu reached out and lifted a long high fly into the corner for a double. Bailey flied out to Williams, but McMillan went to third on a wild pitch. Kell threw out Spahn. Temple struck out, but had to be tagged out by Berra when Yogi dropped the ball. ONE RUN.

SEVENTH — NATIONALS — Lollar caught and Power played first for the Americans. Snider struck out. Musial lined a home run into the left field stands. Kuenn threw out Boyer. Mays walked. Kluszewski doubled to right, scoring Mays. Kluszewski took third on a wild pitch. Bailey grounded out, Kuenn to Power. TWO RUNS.

AMERICAN — Campanella caught for the Nationals. Boone batted for Brewer and lined softly to Boyer. Kuenn flied to Mays. Fox popped to Antonelli.

EIGHTH — NATIONALS — Score pitched for the Americans and Piersall played right field. McMillan fouled to Power. Antonelli struck out. Temple walked and stole second. Snider popped to Lollar.

NINTH — NATIONALS — Wynn pitched for the Americans. Aaron flied to Piersall. Boyer popped to Kuenn. Mays struck out.

AMERICANS — Piersall grounded out, McMillan to Kluszewski. Power beat out a hit to Temple. Kell singled to short right, Power stopping at second. Sievers batted for Wynn and popped to Boyer. Kuenn forced Kell, McMillan to Temple.

All-Star Sidelights

WASHINGTON, July 10 (AP)—Congress has been buckling down for weeks in a drive to adjourn some time this month. But after all, baseball is the national pastime. And not since 1937 has the capital had a major league All-Star game all its own. So—

The Senate recessed yesterday until tomorrow. The House scheduled a noon session amid considerable talk of getting it over with as quickly as possible.

Diners at Stan Musial's St. Louis restaurant will be able to tell the time by the Cardinal star's latest prize. Musial, voted Player of the Decade" in a poll by the Sporting News, received a grandfather's clock in recognition at a Washington Touchdown Club luncheon yesterday. Stan said he would add the $400 timepiece to the trophy collection in his restaurant.

Some of the players complained that the rain of last night left the first and third base lines muddy.

"There may be a little slipping around on those base lines," Kluszewski said.

Golfer Sammy Snead visited the American League dressing room to wish Ted Williams of the Red Sox "good luck." Snead and Williams are partners in a golf and fishing enterprise in Florida.

Three best player awards will be given each year as a result of last night's meeting of the Baseball Writers Association of America. The writers accepted a recommendation of Commissioner Ford Frick to create a separate award for pitchers. Honors now go to the most valuable player and rookie of the year in each league.

The new pitcher's prize will be conferred in the name of the late Cy Young, who hurled 511 victories—the most in baseball—and three no-hitters, including one perfect game.

Hetki Gains Fifth Victory of Season

TORONTO, July 10 (UP)—The red-hot Toronto Maple Leafs, whose nine-game winning streak was snapped by Montreal on Saturday, were off and winging on a new streak today, hopeful it would vault them into the International League lead.

The Leafs bunched five runs in the first inning against the last-place Buffalo Bisons and then went on to hang up a 9-5 victory, their third straight. It was the only game played, the other clubs not being scheduled.

GOLF
by ROBERT MORRISON

Woman's Viewpoint.

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., July 10.

BETSY RAWLS, one of the two-time winners of the women's national open along with Mrs. Babe Didrikson Zaharias and Louise Suggs, believes the veteran Patty Berg should rank first among the favorites for this year's championship at Duluth, July 26-28.

Appearing here in an exhibition that was part of the program for the women's Missouri state amateur tournament, Miss Rawls rated Patty as "still the best player" on the women's tour which stops at St. Louis Aug. 16-19. The opinion was delivered in the face of 1956 developments in which Mrs. Marline Bauer Hagge had captured five of 15 tournaments, including three in a row during June. Miss Berg had won just one.

As for Marlene's sudden surge of successes, Miss Rawls said: "She's just knocking in all her putts, holing out everything."

That, Miss Rawls implied, cannot go on forever.

Mary Rose and Susan Driscoll, the golfing sisters from St. Louis Glen Echo who were at the women's Western open in Des Moines and observed the women pro stars in action, added a word about Marlene's putting touch.

She's one-putted every green I saw her play," said Mary Rose. "And she just takes a moment to do it—steps right up and knocks the putt in."

Streak Is Stopped.

SO perhaps Marlene won't be able to extend her run of victories to include the women's open crown. She was sidetracked in the Western Open at Des Moines where not even exceptional putting could offset her lack of length on the rugged Wakonda Club course.

Marlene went to the Western following a victory in the Women's P.G.A. championship at Detroit, where she defeated Miss Berg in a sudden death playoff after each had tied with 72-hole totals of 291.

At tough Wakonda, however, triumph went to Beverly Hanson and then last weekend at Syracuse, N.Y., Joyce Ziske captured her first win as a professional in a 54-hole event. She had a 221 score; Marlene was tied for fifth with 226.

That made the list of 1956 tournament victories look like this: Mrs. Marlene Hagge five, Betsy Rawls three, Louise Suggs two, Fay Crocker, Mickey Wright, Patty Berg, Joyce Ziske and Bev Hanson one each.

"Louise Suggs could be the winner of the women's open at Duluth," Miss Rawls suggested. "She's about due." Miss Suggs hasn't won since the titleholders event last March.

But Betsy was firm in her opinion about Patty Berg still being the best. Patty has campaigned with brilliance for some 20 years, since teenage and amateur years. She has to be slowing down a little, but she still gets the galleries in the women's events. And maybe she'll get another national open title to go with the one she won 10 years ago when the event first was held.

Competition Grows.

"LOOK at the Ladies' Figures" Is the title of an article by Betty Hicks in Golfing Magazine. She tells about how tough competition continues to grow on the women's tour.

"You really can't blame Pat O'Sullivan and Betty MacKinnon for going home," writes Miss Hicks. She goes on to explain how each reduced their scoring average on the tour and found themselves little better off or worse both in scoring and money - winning position among others in the play-for-pay business.

"Betty MacKinnon was touted as an exceptionally promising young golfer when she joined the L.P.G.A. in 1951," Miss Hicks related. "The tall, strong Texas stylist had a bit of polishing to do on her game. . . . So she brought her average of 81.7 strokes per round in 1953 down to 79.36 in 1954 and to 79.25 in 1955.

"In 1953 she was tenth money winner with $3492. In 1954 she dropped to twelfth, winning $3151. And in 1955, scoring two and a half strokes each round better than she did in '53, she plummeted to twenty-first in scoring averages and 23rd on the prize money list, taking only $1098 back to Mt. Pleasant to put into her new gas station business."

Queen Hopeful Wins Arlington Feature

CHICAGO, July 10 (UP)—Hasty House Farm's Queen Hopeful, 5-year-old mare and 6-5 favorite, scampered home a length in front of Dixiana Farm's Blue Hawaii yesterday to take the $13,450 first-place money in Arlington Park's Modesty Handicap for fillies and mares.

Ridden in 1:44 4-5 by Johnny Adams, Queen Hopeful paid $4.20, $3.40 and $2.60 to her backers. Blue Hawaii paid $11 and $5, and Calumet Farm's 4-year-old filly Amoret was third, paying $4. Arlington's top rider, Bill Hartack, piloted Amoret.

The 1 1-16 mile race, which grossed $22,675, is the only stake race on turf for fillies and mares in the Arlington meeting.

Westwood Player Is 6-4 Winner

By Robert Morrison
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., July 10—Mary Gail Cassett, 19-year-old co-ed from St. Louis's Westwood Country Club, upset the veteran St. Louis tournament player Mrs. Ray Schwartz of Normandie, 6 and 4, in the first round of the women's Missouri State golf tournament today.

It was one of the most surprising results in first round play because Mrs. Schwartz, twice a runner-up in this event, was considered to have had an edge in experience on the Westwood girl.

Mary Gail thus advanced to meet the title-defending Marian Gault of Kansas City in tomorrow's second round. Miss Gault was three over par but had an easy time in turning back Mrs. Alfred Goldman, Westwood, 7 and 6.

Miss Cassett was out in 41, one over women's par, and six up at the turn against Mrs. Schwartz. Both players had a poor start but Mary Gail won three of the first five holes though she was three over par.

Birdies for Winner.

Then the Westwood youngster seized the opportunity and birdied the sixth, seventh and ninth holes with good drives and good chips, none of her birdie putts being longer than six feet. Coming in, Mrs. Schwartz won the eleventh and twelfth when Mary Gail got into trouble with unplayable lies, but Mrs. Schwartz lost the thirteenth and fourteenth with a double bogey and bogey.

Another St. Louis youngster, 17-year-old Kathy Fawcett of Norwood, also moved ahead with an impressive display of scoring. She was just four over women's par and had four birdies in defeating Mrs. Gerard Mos of Kansas City, 3 and 2.

Kathy will get her next test from the former (1951) champion, Mrs. Robert S. Johnson of Kansas City. Mrs. Johnson defeated young Kaya Caldwell, Excelsior Springs, 3 and 2. The home course youngster, four down at one point, had squared the match by the 11th hole, but then couldn't withstand Mrs. Johnson's sharp-shooting and excellent recoveries.

Co-Medalists.

Mrs. Johnson was three over par in her first match. She had shared medalist honor with St. Louis's 19-year-old Susan Driscoll yesterday when each shot 81, three over par for the long-playing Excelsior Springs course.

First Round Results.

(Flight One.)

Mrs. John Wilkin, Kansas City, defeated Karen Schuil, Kansas City, 1 up.

Joan Locke, Joplin, defeated Mrs. Russ Schoneberg, Norwood, 5 and 4.

Mrs. Fred Skoglund, Triple A, defeated Mrs. W. B. Sutton, Norwood, 4 and 2.

Mrs. Don Reid, Westborough, defeated Mrs. McLeod Stephens, St. Louis, 5 and 3.

Mrs. Louis Cassett, Westwood, defeated Mrs. E. D. Imes, Maryville, 4 and 3.

Mrs. Robert S. Johnson, Kansas City, defeated Kaya Caldwell, Excelsior Springs, Mo., 3 and 2.

Flight Two.

Mrs. J. F. Tegeler, Norwood, defeated Jo Anne Staton, Kansas City, 7 and 6.

Mrs. Dwight Lawrence, Kansas City, defeated Mrs. J. L. Hager, St. Joseph, 3 and 1.

Mrs. Sig Meyer, Triple A, defeated Mrs. Edward J. Nix, Kansas City, 4 and 3.

Mrs. J. A. Walter, Kansas City, defeated Kaye Stevenson, Cape Girardeau, 6 and 4.

Mrs. Hugh Anderson, Norwood, defeated Margie Hinkle, Cape Girardeau, 2 up.

Mrs. Ben Vollmer, Norwood, defeated Mrs. Beverly Miller, Kansas City, 3 and 2.

Mary Jane Landreth, Joplin, defeated Mrs. Edwin Knudsen, Trenton, 1 up.

Mrs. William D. Moore, Carrollton, defeated Mrs. H. B. Miller, Rolla, 1 up, 19 holes.

Dick Glendon Dead; Former Rowing Coach

HYANNIS, Mass., July 10 (AP)—Richard A. (Dick) Glendon, 86, whose crews at Navy and Columbia paced Eastern racing in the first three decades of the century, died Sunday night at Cape Cod hospital after a cerebral hemorrhage.

Glendon was an exponent of the body swing or the Glendon lay-back. His crews swung the body far back for extra power.

Friends said Glendon had had several heart attacks and was a hospital patient several times in recent years. He suffered a cerebral hemorrhage on Saturday, seven days after entering the hospital.

A requiem mass will be celebrated Wednesday morning at Holy Trinity Catholic Church, West Harwich. Burial will be at Concord.

Glendon went to Boston in his teens and began coaching schoolboy and club rowing on the Charles river. In 1903 he went to the Naval Academy, where he stayed for two decades, capturing the Olympic title in 1920.

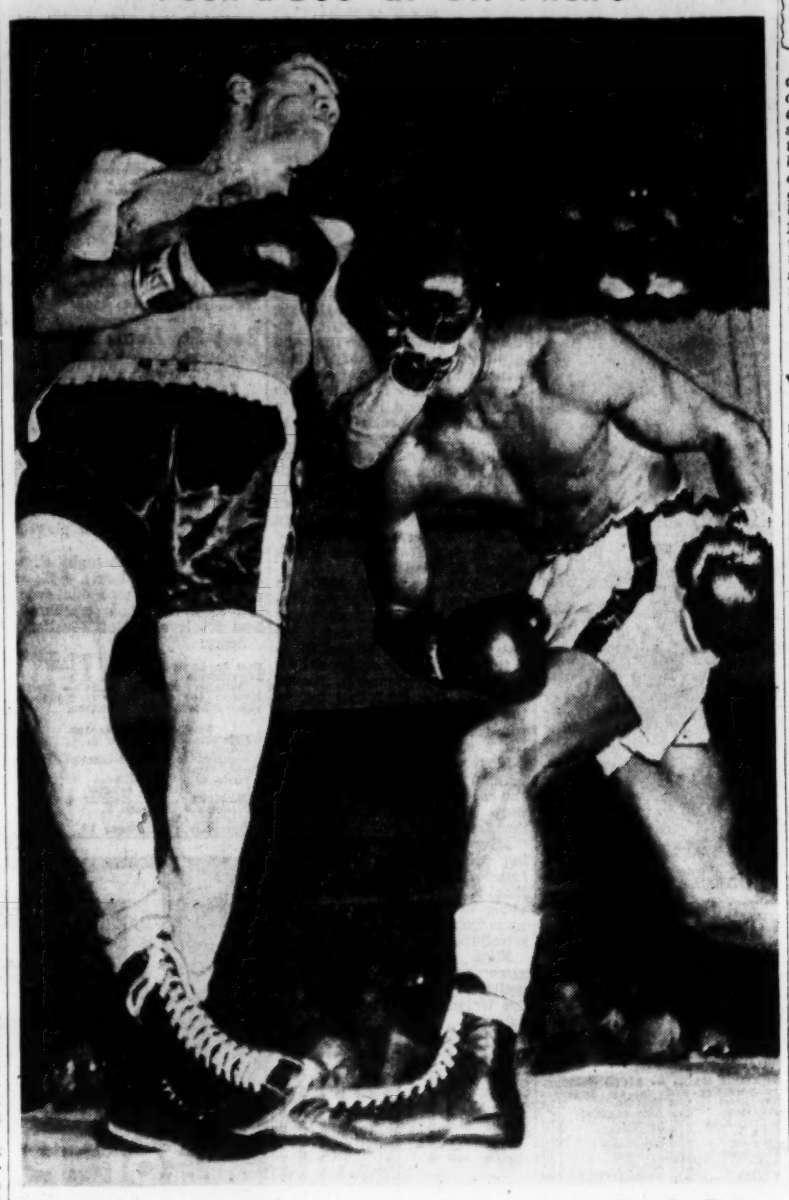

Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz stroked his 1905 crew and Adm. Jonas Ingram was stroke of the '07 crew.

Glendon's son, Richard J., succeeded him at the academy in 1923 and when young Dick moved to Columbia at the end of the 1925 season the father went along as assistant.

Old Dick was called back by Navy in 1929. He closed out his career by winning the Poughkeepsie regatta in 1931.

Young Dick died in 1931 and his brother Hubert succeeded him at Columbia. In 1947 Hubert went into the real estate business on Cape Cod and his father went back to his native Harwich to live with his son.

Peek-a-Boo at St. Nick's

Millan squibbed a pop fly off the end of his bat and just over Vernon's head for a fluke hit, Kluszewski stopping at third. Brewer swept a curve so close to Spahn it eluded Berra and was ruled as a wild pitch, Kluszewski scoring and McMillan taking second. The runner stayed there as Spahn grounded to Kuenn and Temple struck out.

Their favorites trailing by five runs, American League fans finally had a chance to cheer in the sixth.

Kleszewski was at first for the Nationals as Fox began it with his second hit, a line drive to left-center. Williams came up and with a "2-1" count the veteran Red Sox star leaned into a pitch and lifted a tremendous fly into the right-center field bullpen, a good 415 feet distant. It was Ted's fourth All-Star homer, tying him with Musial for the leadership in mid-summer inter-league play.

Mickey Also Whacks One.

When Mantle, next up, just seemed to wade into a high breaking ball and lined it into the left-center field seats for a home run, Alson came out and removed Spahn, bringing forth another lefthander, Antonelli of the Giants.

Berra was scheduled to bat next. Perhaps because of Yogi's bruised hand—there was no announcement—he was lifted to Lollar, and Sherm popped a single into short center. The fifth straight hit, bringing a prolonged roar from the throng, was Kaline's shorp ground single to left, Lollar stopping at second.

With Lawrence warming up in the National League bullpen, Antonelli suddenly righted himself. The righthanded-hitting Power of the Athletics, batting for Vernon as old Senator fans booed, flied to Musial. Then, fooled by a half-speed pitch, Kell grounded directly to McMillan for an easy double play in which Temple was the pivot man.

Lineup changes as the Nationals batted in the seventh were Lollar behind the plate and Power at first base, Snider, first up, went down swinging, but Musial, hitting Brewer's first pitch, lined it into the left-center stands for a home run, making the score 6 to 3.

Stan's Fifth.

Boyer, stopped for the first time, grounded to Kuenn. Mays walked and then came the most exciting action of the game to that point. With the fleet Mays breaking, Kluszewski lined a pitch over Power's head and into the right field corner. Kaline, scurrying to collar it, couldn't find a handle for split-second and Hutchinson, coaching third, had the swift Mays running all the way. The play might have been close, but Power juggled Kaline's throw. There wa no error, shoewever, and Big Klu was credited with an RBI. He wobbled to to third on a wild pitch that broke into the dirt in front of Lollar. Bailey ended the inning by bouncing to Kuenn.

As the Americans batted in the seventh, the crowd stretched and Campanella squatted in catching harness, replacing Bailey as the Natisonal League "quarterback." Ray Boone of Detroit, batting for Brewer, lined to Boyer, who reached up forthe ball, but did not have to leave his feet. Kuenn flied harmlessly to Mays in short right, and there was the unusual sight of a pitcher handling a pop fly as Antonelli waved off the infielders and caught Fox's feeble loft.

Score, the brilliant young Cleveland lefthander, pitched and Piersall of the Red Sox went to the right field in the eighth. Score, fogging from a smooth easy motion, got McMillan on a soft little fly to Power and fired three strikes past Antonelli. The determined Temple walked and stole second, sliding easily under Lollar's high throw. Sherm then gave the spectators a thrill as he was forced to lunge at the last instant to catch Snider's pop-up in fair territory.

Musial, Boyer Collide.

In the home eighth the Nationals' defense was swung far to the right when Williams lifted a high fly to short left. Musial ranged in and Boyer outt. They almost collided, but Stan slid forward to make the catch and avoid contact. He appeared hurt for an instant and Alston and Hutchinson hurried onto the field. The crowd protested as he left, but apparently as precautionary measure, plus actual strong-armed defensive ability of youth, Aaron of the Braves was sent to left field.

The inning, meanwhile, was easy for Antonelli, who fanned Mantle and retired Lollar on a long fly to Snider.

As the ninth began, Wynn, veteran Cleveland righthander, was on the moun. Aaron flied to Piersall. Boyer was given warm applause. Fooled on a let-up, Kenny got out in front of a pitch and, off balance, popped to Kuenn. Mays, swinging hard, fanned. He was the 12th National League strikeout victim.

The last-chance ninth began drably for the American League. Piersall grounded to McMillan. Then voices were lifted in hope as Power singled off Temple's glove and Kell sliced a base hit into right field, Power stopping at second.

The roar increased as St. Louisan Roy Sievers, popular Washington power-hitter, was announced as a pinch-batter for Wynn. Sievers couldn't deliver, however, popping to Boyer. And when Kuenn hit one off his hands in an easy grounder to short, McMillan flipped to sidekick Temple for a game-ending force out.

Athletics Sign Pitcher.

KANSAS CITY, July 10 (AP)—The Kansas City Athletics announced the signing of William Patrick Corrigan, a pitcher from Baltimore, Md. He will report to Grand Island of the Nebraska State League. A lefthander, Corrigan is 19. He pitched high school ball in Baltimore and at John Hopkins University.

Joe Gordon In, Joost Out as Seals Manager

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10 (UP)—Joe Gordon, who quit in disgust 11 days ago as coach of the strife-torn Detroit Tigers, took on a fresh headache today as manager of the sixth-place San Francisco Seals.

The former New York Yankee infield star replaced Eddie Joost yesterday as pilot of the Pacific Coast league club shortly after Joost was given the bounce by the parent Boston Red Sox.

"We feel we weren't getting the full potential out of the club," said President Jerry Donovan.

BETTER GOLF IN FIVE MINUTES

By Victor J. East

The writer is a master club designer who has spent half a century playing golf, teaching and perfecting golf club designs. In these articles, of which this is the third of a series, he gets right down to the basic questions of what makes a good golfer an expert. He tells how best to put your clubs to work for you, how to keep your movements natural, how to choose the most effective swing, plus a score of other invaluable tips that will help you improve your game.

Points to Remember

1. Sole the club squarely.
2. Grip the club before placing it to the ball.
3. Walk toward the ball and place the club.
4. Look at objective by rotating, not lifting, head.
5. Feel when shaft and club face are square to objective.
6. Do not be foot conscious.
7. Move club back and forth behind ball. Feel and see that the club face is moving in a suitable path along the line of direction.

By J. Victor East
Article 3

YOUR golf clubs won't aim themselves, so now I offer you a few suggestions on the most practical manner to give direction to your shots.

You take aim between the time you approach the ball and begin your "waggle" or preliminary swing. This is the point at which your mastery of the grip and proper execution of The Basic Movement become most important. For once you start on your swing, you pass control of your club from your combined senses of sight and feel to habit. There is no longer time for any last-second adjustments. If your grip and Basic Movement do not flow naturally as the result of habit, the time you take to aim might just as well be spent on wishing.

You can master these fundamentals only through practice. With regards to your grip, I suggest keeping a club handy. Pick it up and get into your correct grip at frequent intervals until it becomes routine. Cultivate the feel of where the sole of the club is actually located when you are swinging. In the event your handicap is ten or more, you should confine exercise at first to not more than a half-swing, with the object of testing how well you can brush the sole of your club along a floor or other level surface.

You should continue this exercise until you no longer bump the surface with either the front or back edge of your club sole. Then extend your exercise to a full swing.

For a revealing and convincing test, I suggest you swing your club sole across a gravel or concrete surface, since the resulting scratches will assist in cultivating the correct feel of knowing what is exactly right. The bottom edge of the club is your sight for aiming, and it must go through in line with and square to the direction you want. It is by feel only that you can expect to make proper contact with the ball.

Try to follow this same pattern each time you prepare to make a shot.

(1) Place the club (properly gripped) to the ball in the position in which you want it to make contact during the basic movement.

(2) Look at the objective. Rotate, do not lift, the head in sighting.

(3) Your left foot and club face will automatically take position to insure the angle of play. The right foot adjusts itself in relation to the left.

A Champion Takes Aim.

OF the champions of this past half-century, the most efficient in taking aim and having the preliminaries of the address flow smoothly in their respective swings are Bobby Jones and Gene Sarazen. Each had that special brand of artistry that enabled him to take aim without any apparent effort and within a minimum of time. Other players have taken less time, but their doing so might be described as hasty indecision rather than precision, seriously handicapping their chances of attaining real or enduring greatness.

Taking a tee shot, for example, Bob Jones, having arrived at the pattern of stroke to be played, would approach the ball from the left, rear side. He would casually place the forward side of his club face alongside the ball. He would then look from the ball along the line of play. Meanwhile, as he moved around with his club, his left foot—and at the same time his club face — would line up squarely with the intended ball direction as a matter of habit. With his club and left foot oriented, Bob, in continued smooth progression, would start his preliminary waggle.

During this time, his right foot would become adjusted by turning slightly outward from its original position, in which it pointed toward the ball. The waggle would be over when the club momentarily returned to the ball, and he'd move right into his backswing.

The point I want to emphasize is that this great champion of yesteryear, having once decided on the kind of shot to be played, maintained mobility until the ball got under way. He remained in motion while taking aim, addressing the ball, and making his stroke. Each movement progressed so smoothly into the next that they blended into one complete whole. Hence it is that Gene Sarazen, in his recently published book, so aptly described the golf stroke as the "one-piece swing." Of the presentday players, Sam Snead is the best exponent of the smooth stroke-making technique just described.

Light on the Subject.

SO often golfers are led to believe that misdirection of the ball is due to an error in swing. One student of mine was convinced that his error was in his swing. My contention was that he did not aim properly beforehand; and anything he did, consciously or otherwise, to compensate for the basic error was unsound practice. He was so insistent I decided on a way to prove how he was wrong. I had a small electric bulb set squarely in the face of a wood club and connected it with a wire up through the shaft to a battery. The light would flash in the direction you would aim. In a semi-darkened room, I proved to his complete satisfaction that his preaiming in the direction in which he expected the ball to go was far off line.

I am not suggesting that you construct a similar device; it would be too expensive. However, I do suggest that in practicing your aim you use a wood club rather than an iron. The wider sole of the wood makes more definite the proper placing of the sole.

Dupas, Second-Ranked Lightweight, Is Upset by Kenny Lane

Southerner Will Seek Re-Match

NEW ORLEANS, July 10 (UP) — Second-ranked lightweight Ralph Dupas today looked toward a possible rematch with unranked Kenny Lane and watched his title aspirations fade in the face of a 10-round split decision loss to the Michigan southpaw.

Lane, at 138¾, got a revenge win over fast-moving Dupas, who came in at 139, last night to move into line for more lucrative fights with high-ranking boxers in the division. He advanced continually on the retreating Dupas, who fought only in flurries, to get the decision of one judge and Referee Pete Giaruso.

A crowd of 3411 paid a net gate of $8870 to see Lane get revenge for the split decision Dupas picked up here in March 1955.

The fight appeared to be Lane's most of the way as he belted the lightning-fast Dupas with solid rights and lefts to the midsection. Dupas brought cheers from the home-town crowd with feverish flurries in several rounds, but could never keep up a sustained attack against the flat-footed, advancing Lane.

Dupas said he thought he had beaten the Muskegon, Mich., battler, but most of the fans voiced approval of the decision. Dupas immediately began talking about getting revenge in a rubber match here.

Promoter Heard Ragas, expecting Dupas to win, said before the bout he had offered Larry Boardman $11,000 and Cisco Andrade $6500 to meet the winner. However, neither of these men is expected to come here to meet Lane.

Dupas looked a little slower than usual and rarely took the fight to Lane. When he did throw the first punch, he looked his old self, but the visitor was on the attack most of the time.

Judge Phil Gaffrey saw it 6-2 and 2 even in Lane's favor while Giaruso had it 5-3-2 for the underdog. Judge Eddie Wolfe went with Dupas, 4-3 and 3 even. The United Press card had it 5-3 and 2 even in favor of Lane.

FATHER-SON RIDING COMBINATION WILL GET INTO ACTION AT FAIRMOUNT PARK

By Herman Wecke

Chicago race tracks boast of their father-son riding combination of the Adamses—Johnny and John Robert—but Fairmount Park will have its own father-son combination when the Colclasures swing into action at the Collinsville course tomorrow.

It will be no typographical error when the fans see L. J. Colclasure and L. K. Colclasure as the probable riders. L. J., better known as Jake, is the father and L. K. (called Keith) the son.

The elder Colclasure, who admits he's in his early 40s, is one of the track's leading riders with 45 firsts to his credit. Young Colclasure, just 16 years of age and weighing 96 pounds, has been granted a rider's license by the stewards, headed by Ralph W. Choisser, representing the state.

Blaine Painter holds Keith Colclasure's contract and predicts a bright future for the youngster, who has been exercising horses at the track for the last two years. Keith is a sophomore at Louisville, Ill., High School and, despite his low weight, he was a member of the school's freshman football team last fall.

Young Colclasure has been around horses quite a while. His father quit riding several years ago to take up the trainer's end of the sport and as a result wintered thoroughbreds on his farm at Louisville. So it was only natural that Young Keith got an early chance to ride.

Trainers at the track consider Jake Colclasure one of the most efficient handlers at the track in working horses. He has been teaching Keith some of the tricks of the trade and there are those who believe that the youngster is ready for action in real competition.

Veteran trainers, who saw Job Dean Jessop, Charlie Burr and Clarence Meaux, the present riding leader, pilot their first winners at the Collinsville course, call Keith Colclasure one of the "most promising prospects to come along in years."

It will be interesting to see how father and son fare against each other in a real race.

Smart Hussy Disqualified.

The 4490 fans, who sent $203,222 through the mutuel windows for the first Monday night program of the meeting, saw a disqualification and a deadheat for fourth place. . . . In the fourth race, Smart Hussy, with Kenny Griffith up, beat Patty Peg by a head, but a claim of foul by John Delahoussaye was allowed and Patty Peg was moved up to first and Smart Hussy dropped to second. . . . Remodeled and Liberty Andy ran to a dead heat for the $50 share of the purse in the sixth race, won by Make. . . . The double on Sunny Song and Mister Perfect paid $74.40. . . . Clarence Meaux and Jake Colclasure, the jockey leaders, each had a winner. . . Meaux made it 61 firsts with Sunny Song ($9.40), while Colclasure's 45th victory came with Aspirant ($20.20) in the eighth.

H. H. Rendleman's Shoot Man, a five-time winner at the meeting, will try to make it No. 6 in the sixth race at one mile and one sixteenth tonight.

Bowls 300 Game.

Jerry Tharp, who has been bowling 10 years, rolled a perfect game of 300 on alleys No. 1 and 2 in a scratch league on the Arcade Lanes. This other games were 214 and 215 giving him a 729 total.

Piper New Director At Kansas City U.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 10 (AP) — A basketball coach whose teams have won 97 per cent of their games is the new athletic director at Kansas City University.

He is J. Ray Piper, 44, who was named to succeed Paul Handli at the K.C.U. post.

10,000 Turn Out As Fairground Turns on Lights

There was considerable pregame hoopla for some 10,000 fans at Fairground Park last night—bands, marching groups, Miss St. Louis and Miss Posture of Missouri—but the fireworks didn't come until the ninth inning of the baseball game.

Then the Red Villas, held to one hit up to the ninth, started that inning with four straight hits and finished it with a total of six good for five runs and a 6-1 non-league victory. Right-hander Fred Walton of the Villas allowed only four hits, none after the second inning until a scratch single broke the ice in the ninth. He fanned 12.

Big blow for Manager Johnny Tobin's Villas was Dale McMillin's two-run triple. Dick Loeser, Borbein starter, hurled four hitless innings. Jack Bocklage allowed two safeties and one run in two frames and Frank Moore finished up.

Tonight the scene shifts to Carondelet Park where the other lighted baseball diamond will be dedicated. A ball game and entertainment are scheduled at 6, the official ceremonies at 8:15 with Mayor Raymond R. Tucker throwing the first ball before the senior contest between Carondelet Sunday Morning Club No. 1 and Kutis North at 8:45.

Mayor Tucker, Board of Alderman President Donald Gunn and Alderman Barney Mueller were among the speakers on the Fairground No. 1 program.

Miss St. Louis in the upcoming Miss Universe contest at Long Beach, Calif., is Diana Stopke. iMss Posture is Lynn Leahy and Miss Posture runner-up is Toni Stein. All three were introduced.

First Muny senior league game under the Fairground lights will be Friday between the Union Printers and Polish Falcons.

City-County Legion Series Opens Tonight

By John J. Archibald

The county will be going for its third straight victory over the city's representative in American Legion junior baseball when Overland's Thoman-Boothe Post meets Stockham tonight in an 8:15 playoff opener at Fairground Park. It will be the first chips-down game to be played under the newly installed lights on Diamond No. 1, following last night's Muny exhibition between Borbein-Young and the Red Villas.

The Maplewood team that eventually landed in the national finals broke the ice for the county's Legion clubs in 1954 by beating out city champion Aubuchon-Dennison in the state meet, while Thoman-Boothe beat the Aubuchons in the city-county series last year. Stockham was the last St. Louis team to represent the area in outstate play, when it went on to the Missouri championship under Coach Al Grosch in 1953.

Grosch's team swept through the city competition with a perfect 10-0 record, but the defending state champion Thoman-Boothe club may be in more of a fighting mood after its two-game playoff victory against county competition over the weekend. The Overland team's season record now is 8 and 4.

Tomorrow night the playoffs will switch to the lighted field at Ballwin, and if a third game is necessary it will be at Fairground Thursday night, as was determined by a coin flip.

Stockham's team is composed of boys from the state high school champion Beaumont squad, plus three key players from Central. All of Coach Bill Schaeffer's Thoman-Boothe players are from Ritenour High, after candidates from several other eligible high schools failed to try out for the state Legion championship club.

Signaigo's Hole-in-One.

Larry Signaigo, playing in a foursome at Creve Coeur Golf Club, sank his tee shot on No. 13 for his first hole-in-one. His astonished friends were Francis Russell, Jim Evans and Don Russell. Signaigo used a 7 iron; the ball bounced once and dropped into the cup.

Player Pension Credit for Duty In Korea Appears to Be Assured

WASHINGTON, July 10 (AP)—Major League baseball owners are expected to approve pension credit for ballplayers who served in the armed forces during the last five years.

Commissioner Ford Frick said the recommendation was agreed to yesterday at a meeting of the major leagues' executive council and the ballplayers' pension committee.

Charles Segar, Frick's executive secretary, said approval is expected when the proposal is submitted to the 16 club owners at a meeting in August.

World War II veterans are permitted to count military service toward their pensions but such credit was halted when fighting began in Korea. Segar said a study indicates about 30 or 35 major leaguers would be eligible for military credit during the last five years.

Major league club owners have been underwriting the pensions—begun in 1947—in return for the proceeds from radio and television rights to the World Series and All-Star games.

Next year, a new system begins under which the player pension fund gets 60 per cent and the owners 40 per cent of the broadcasting money. Frick recently negotiated a five-year contract for these rights, totaling $16,250,000.

Presently players are eligible for pensions at age 50, starting at $50 a month for one playing year and running up to $100 a month for 10 years.

Steward Lad Winner In $5000 Pace Event

WESTBURY, N.Y., July 10 (UP)—Steward Lad held his ground in the stretch run to win the $5000 Catskills Pace over the mile and one-sixteenth route by a length in 2:11 2-5 at Roosevelt Raceway.

The eight-year-old bay horse, owned by the Carolina Stock Farm of Sunbury, N.C., was driven by Jimmy Jordan and returned $8.60.

Volto Man was second with Widower's Illmo third. Steward Lad took the lead shortly after the first quarter and set his own pace the rest of the way.

Best Duck Outlook in Decades, Manitoba Reports

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 10—A breeding population nearly twice that of 1953's banner season is raising a big crop of ducks to go winging down the Mississippi flyway in the fall, promising some of the best shooting in decades.

Bert Cartwright of Ducks Unlimited (Canada) reported Tuesday that the duck prospects in Central and Southern Manitoba are far beyond anything experienced for years.

"Birds are all over the prairie duck factory," he says, "but Manitoba has an almost doubled nesting population due to late breakup in more Northern areas, which held the birds in the agricultural latitudes."

Birds from Manitoba form the bulk of webfeet which wing down the Mississippi flyway.

Water conditions are excellent, with plenty of moisture to see broods through to maturity safely. Broods are generally above the long term average of six, and are being reinforced by late and second nesting clutches.

Canada geese are also making an excellent showing, with broods of five to seven being observed, particularly in Southern Alberta.

Troy, Luedee Rematched for August Fight

NEW YORK, July 10 (UP)—Middleweights Willie Troy and Jerry Luedee were rematched today for another 10-rounder at St. Nicholas Arena, Aug. 13 or 20, because of last night's close fight which Troy won on upset majority decision.

Troy of Washington, D.C., weighed 161¾ pounds to 161¼ for Luedee of New Haven, Conn.

Judge Leo Birnbaum favored 23-year-old Troy on rounds, 6-4, but Judge Frank Fullam called it a draw after voting 5-5 on rounds and 5-5 on points. Referee Davey Feld also voted 5-5 on rounds but favored Troy on points, 8-6. The United Press called it a draw 5-5 and 5-5.

The 1003, who paid $2125, saw Luedee force the fighting in most of the rounds. Jerry's left hooks to body and head won the first three; but then Troy's body attack slowed up Luedee until the ninth.

Detroit Tenpin Star in Front; Weber Trails

After yesterday's two rounds he led his nearest contender, Joe Brown of New York, by 43 points.

Lindemann, Brown and six other top bowlers from around the country are competing for a top prize of $5,000 in the tourney at the Paramus Bowling Alleys which continue through July 18.

Lindemann split his two games with Foy Belcher of Los Angeles. Belcher won the first game with a 256, the best thus far, while Lindemann rolled a 199. In the second game Lindemann scored 224 to Belcher's 193. Belcher is in fifth place.

Dick Weber of St. Louis, with a 1-3 record, remained in last place with a 16-10 point rating.

Standings:

Kocsis Forced Out of Publinx Golf Tourney

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10 (AP)—Defending Champion Sam Kocsis withdrew today from the thirty-first annual Amateur Public Links golf championship because of a death in his family.

United States Golf Association officials said Kocsis' father-in-law died last night and the golfer was flying back to Detroit. No further details were available here.

Kocsis had shot a 77 in the first qualifying round yesterday.

The South and the West were setting the pace as the qualifying went into the second and crucial round of medal play.

The first day leader turned out to be chunky Scotty McBeath, a sporting goods salesman from Palo Alto, Calif., who has been one of the top amateurs in northern California for several years. He shot a 34-35—69—the only man in the crowd able to crack the magic 70 mark on a course that read 36-36—72 for par.

Walter Calvey of Alton, Ill. had a 76, while John Hand, another Alton entrant, finished with 81.

10-Year-Old Hurls His 8th No-Hitter Of Khoury Season

Ten-year-old lefthander Kenny Holtzman pitched his eighth no-hitter of the season as his team, the Lapps, closed out their Khoury Bantam league season undefeated. Holtzman struck out 16 in six innings in winning from the Trojans, 22-0. Teammate Johnny Hewitt fanned 13 and allowed one hit as the Lapps won the second game of the doubleheader, 22-0.

The Lapps finished up with a record of 17-0 and are ready now for the inter-league playoffs. They play in University City.

MEDIATORS PLAN JOINT THURSDAY STEEL MEETING

Federal Conciliators to Confer in Advance With Both Sides in Strike.

WASHINGTON, July 10 (AP)—Federal mediators today fixed Thursday as the "probable" day to begin joint meetings in Pittsburgh of industry and union representatives in an effort to end the steel strike.

Joseph F. Finnegan, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, announced at the same time that mediators will hold preliminary meetings with both sides today and tomorrow.

Finnegan said he would meet at 5 p.m. here today with David J. McDonald, president of the United Steelworkers, and Arthur G. Goldberg, union counsel.

There will be a preliminary session tomorrow, probably in Finnegan's office here about noon, with an industrial group headed by John A. Stephens, vice president of United States Steel Corporation.

Finnegan said that he and Clyde Mills, assistant director of the mediation service, and special assistant Robert H. Moore, would attend the joint meetings between management and union officials.

The preliminary sessions, he said, will be conducted in order to get a "better understanding" of the issues prior to beginning of the joint meeting.

U.S. Has Kept Hands Off

In the long weeks of contract negotiations the Federal Government remained entirely out of the picture. After exploratory talks in Pittsburgh, it decided to take the initiative after neither side made any effort to resume contract talks or indicated a change in position.

Negotiations collapsed just six hours before the strike July 1 by 650,000 steelworkers which cut the nation's steel production by 90 per cent.

Industry had offered a 52-month contract at terms valued by the industry at 17⅔ cents an hour per employe for the first year. The union estimated the offer at about 14 cents. The average wage in the industry before the strike was $2.46 an hour, including overtime.

The Government acted again yesterday to conserve steel products for essential defense work by increasing the plant area that operating steel mills must devote to production for defense.

The move announced by the Commerce Department doubles the space that the 35 or more steel mills not affected by the strike must devote to defense production. For hot-rolled bars, the space increases range up to 800 per cent.

Previous Order.

Last Friday the department ordered that certain types of steels in warehouses be shipped out only for defense purposes. The latest order applied to most steel except salvage or scrap.

The General Services Administration, meanwhile, ordered government agencies not to dispose of any steel they hold until further notice.

The economic effects of the strike continue to spread. Some 30,000 of the nation's 200,000 soft coal miners joined the list of those idle today after annual 10-day vacations. They work in captive (steel company owned) mines.

In other allied industries, the number of unemployed now totals an estimated 50,000. A special survey conducted by the Department of Labor and Industry in Pennsylvania shows 202,900 workers idle in the state, of whom 185,800 are steelworkers.

unhappy about recent statements by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and Vice President Nixon criticizing India's neutral policy as "immoral." Conceivably, the Eisenhower party, with the masterminding of the Adams-Hall combination, could win control of Congress. But if the past record means anything, this would be no guarantee of action on the policies identified with the Eisenhower name.

ZANESVILLE (O.) MAN NAMED ELKS GRAND EXALTED RULER

CHICAGO, July 10 (AP)—A Zanesville (O.) business man and former newspaper editor was elected grand exalted ruler at the ninety-second convention of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks yesterday. Seven other officers were named for one-year terms.

Fred L. Bohn, editor of the Zanesville Signal from 1928-1938 and now part owner of a plumbing and heating supply firm, defeated Cyril A. Kremser, Cleveland, O., in the first contested election for the Elk's top office in 29 years.

WHOLESALE PRICE OF POTATOES HERE AT RECORD LEVEL

The wholesale price of potatoes today was $10 per 100 pounds, the highest in the memories of dealers here, they said.

A chain store spokesman said they are hard to buy even at the $10 price because of their scarcity. California long whites now average between $9.75 and $10 for 100 pounds. The selling range for Southern red potatoes is between $8.50 and $10.

Consumers can expect to find retail prices higher if the wholesale price remains steady or elimbs, it was said. The rise, which has been gradual for the past 10 weeks, began when the old crop was selling out. The price trend has climbed ever since. The increase was caused by a poor seed potato crop last year and high seed prices last winter, which discouraged some potato planting.

WOMAN BEING HELD AS PAROLE VIOLATOR

Wife Who Smuggled Saw Blades Into City Jail in New Trouble.

Mrs. Lynn V. Ray, who was sentenced to six months in the City Workhouse and paroled in August 1955 on a charge of smuggling hacksaw blades to her husband when he was in the city jail, was held in Butler county jail at Poplar Bluff today for St. Louis authorities as a parole violator.

She was arrested Saturday with Richard Collins, a Little Rock (Ark.) herb salesman, who is being held for federal authorities on a charge of kidnaping Mrs. Ray and her 8-month-old son, Lynn. Collins denied the kidnaping charge and Mrs. Ray told Missouri Highway Patrol Sgt. George L. Montgomery she was with Collins voluntarily.

The charge against Collins is contained in a federal warrant issued at Little Rock June 29 on complaint of Ray, who used a fictitious name in applying for the warrant. He gave his name as "Ray Tear" and his wife's name as "Mrs. Vera Brown Tear."

Ray is being sought by authorities at Little Rock since a check of his fingerprints revealed his true identity, Montgomery reported. Ray, an ex-convict, effected a jail break in Green Bay, Wis., in July 1955, using hacksaw blades smuggled to him there by his wife.

The Missouri Highway Patrol gave the following explanation of events leading up to the present plight of Collins and the Rays:

Collins and Ray worked together for some time, then Collins allegedly left Ray and took Ray's automobile, wife and child with him.

The automobile, a check made following Collins' arrest showed, was stolen in Houston, Tex., last May 20.

NEW YORK, July 10 (AP)—American Telephone & Telegraph Co. reported today its net income for the second quarter ended June 30 rose to $152,700,000, equal to $2.75 a share, from $134,417,598 or $2.66 a share in the corresponding 1955 quarter.

Cleo F. Craig, A.T.&T. president, said the gain in telephones by the Bell System, its operating subsidiary, will approximate 1,550,000 in the first half of 1956. This is more than 25 per cent above the increase in the first six months of 1955.

Craig noted a steady increase in the number of homes served by multiple phones instead of only one. So far this year, he said, the increase in additional home telephones is about 40 per cent greater than a year ago at this time.

This increase, together with demand for stepped-up service from party to individual lines, means that millions of new lines will be needed in the future. Craig noted that A.T.&T. was selling $250,000,000 of debentures today at competitive bidding to help pay the cost of additions and improvements in service.

For 12 months ended June 30, A.T.&T. had net income of $583,770,000, equal to $10.98 a share, compared with $509,680,967 or $10.45 a share in the preceding 12-month period.

The consolidated report of the Bell System shows that for three months to May 31 net income amounted to $191,061,777 or $3.36 a share of the parent company's stock, against $165,304,141 or $3.19 a share in the 1955 quarter. Gross operating revenues were $1,440,352,590, against $1,303,158,859.

For 12 months to May 31, consolidated net income was $720,673,036 or $13.28 a share on the parent company stock, against $615,868,206 or $12.39 a share in the preceding 12 months. Gross was $5,528,025,299, against $4,991,428,704.

In his quarterly report to shareowners, Craig noted laying of the first trans-Atlantic telephone cable was nearing its scheduled completion this fall.

AIR FORCE GENERAL TO SPEAK IN BRENTWOOD TOMORROW

Brig. Gen. Kenneth H. Gibson, commander of the Eighth Air Division, will speak at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the Brentwood High School auditorium. His address will be part of St. Louis's observance of National Skywatch week, the fourth anniversary of the Ground Observer Corps.

City and civilian defense officials of all county municipalities and Ground Observer Corps personnel have been invited to attend. The program will include a ceremony in which awards will be presented to civilian members of the St. Louis Air Defense Filter Center.

BORROWING COSTS TO U.S. SHOWS DECREASE

Treasury Pays 2.387 Per Cent on Short-Term Paper.

NEW YORK, July 10 (AP)—Rails and utilities were steady but industrials eased in late trading in an irregular bond market today. Investment quality issues were firm. Trading was relatively active.

The Treasury's short-term borrowing costs declined to 2.387 per cent, lowest since the end of March. Last week a similar issue drew a rate of 2.409 per cent.

Among the rails, Katy 4½s jumped 2 at 85. Missouri Pacific 5s were steady. The Same Road's 4¾s of 2020 gained ¼ and the 4½s of 2005 moved up ⅛.

U.S. Treasury bonds continued to decline in quiet transactions in the over-the-counter market. Intermediates and long range issues were down 3-32 to 6-32.

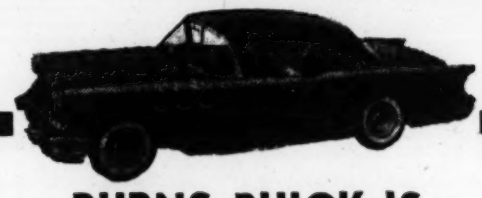

A. T. & T. AWARDS ISSUE

NEW YORK, July 10 (AP)—American Telephone & Telegraph Co. awarded its $250,000,000 of debentures to a nationwide group of underwriters led by First Boston Corp. and Halsey, Stuart & Co. on a bid of 102.1199 for a 3⅞ per cent coupon.

An opposing bid by a group managed by Morgan Stanley & Co. was 101.439, also for a 3⅞ coupon.

STEELS LEAD UPWARD MARCH LATE IN DAY

NEW YORK, July 10 (AP)—The stock market hesitated for nearly two hours today after definite word came that President Eisenhower would run and then prices rose on a renewed wave of confidence.

Brokers said that when the holders of big profits on the current rise of more than four weeks failed to cash them on the news from Gettysburg traders regained confidence.

Leading issues rose from fractions to around two points with some issues advancing well beyond this. Steels, which had been spotty, led in the upturn with other industrial shares.

The market was higher from the start. It was mixed right before the announcement came. It then rose slightly. But it backed away and remained indecisive for nearly two hours then steels led the renewed advance.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced 70 cents to $186.60 with the industrials up $1.10, the rails also up $1.10 and the utilities unchanged.

(Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was 1.82 points higher at 508.34 at the close. The 20 rails gained 1.09 at 167.39 and the 15 utilities rose .04 of a point to 68.98, a new 1956 high.)

Of 1176 issues traded there were 570 advances and 356 declines. There were 57 new highs for the year and 19 new lows.

Volume for the day totaled 2,450,000 shares compared with 2,180,000 yesterday.

The market was unruffled for nearly two hours after the news came from Gettysburg. It had been slightly ahead, then turned mixed. It improved a bit on the news, then backed away somewhat in quiet trading.

Not until late in the session did the steels pick up with Bethlehem ahead around two points and U.S. Steel and Youngstown up around a point. Motors came to life as Chrysler gained over a point. General Motors and Ford advanced less. Laggard rails then caught the mood. Santa Fe and other rails rose around a point.

Aircrafts were down, however. Douglas and United Aircraft were one-point losers. Boeing shaded a major fraction. Coppers remained mixed following overnight news of cuts in copper prices.

Reynolds Metals, du Pont and Radio Corp. All gained a point or better. Zenith was up nearly two points.

Among the oils, Amerada dipped more than a point while Royal Dutch rose a point or so.

Odd Lot Transactions.

NEW YORK, July 10 (AP)—The New York Stock Exchange reported today these odd lot transactions by principal dealers on the exchange for July 9: purchases of 292,561 shares; sales of 220,660 shares including 1132 shares sold short.

BANK CLEARINGS

St. Louis bank clearings for July 10 were $63,800,000 compared with $66,300,000 a year ago.

LONDON STOCK INDEX

LONDON, July 10 (AP)—The Financial Times daily index of London stocks today was 175.3, up 0.5.

Day's Review Of Business And Finance

Kennecott Copper Corp., the country's largest copper producer, today cuts its price for the metal six cents a pound to 40 cents a pound, following the lead of Phelps-Dodge Corp. The new Kennecott price, effective Wednesday, leaves the Anaconda Co. alone among major producers holding to the previous 46-cent price. Phelps-Dodge cut its price from 46 cents to 40 yesterday. It was not known immediately whether Anaconda would fall in line with the other big producers.

There were 208 business failures in the holiday week ended July 5, compared with 249 the week before and 204 in the like week a year ago, Dun & Bradstreet Inc. reported.

Small sales of print cloths, broadcloths and a few other constructions were reported in the cotton textile market Tuesday. Converters bid unsuccessfully for the popular 80-square print cloth at 18½ cents a yard in forward position on average makes. The 38½ 64x60 5.35 yards print cloth sold at 14¼ cents a yard for quick delivery, off ¼ cent.

Government reported that sales by all wholesalers totaled $10,700,000,000 in May. On a seasonably adjusted basis this was an increase of 3 per cent from April and also exceeded sales for May a year ago. The report showed, however, that inventories of all wholesalers were valued at $12,500,000,000 at the end of May, up slightly from April on a seasonably adjusted basis. In durable goods, machinery and metals wholesalers' sales were up 4 per cent in May while lumber and building materials and electrical goods groups reported sales gain of 2 per cent, all on seasonally adjusted basis. (A.P.)

Debits to demand deposits, except interbank and U.S. Government, at 26 St. Louis banks amounted to $2,349,606,000 during June, the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis said. This represents a 2 per cent decrease from May. Compared with June a year ago, debits were up 2 per cent.

WASHINGTON, July 10 (AP)—The Agriculture Department today forecast this year's wheat crop at 922,262,000 bushels and the corn crop at 3,266,688,000 bushels.

The wheat estimate is 410,000 bushels less than thee 922,672,000 bushls forecast a month ago. It compares also with last year's revised estimate of 936,761,000 bushels and with the 10-year (1945-54) average of 1,148,289,000 bushels.

The corn estimate is the first of the year and compares with last year's revised estimate of 3,241,536,000 bushels and with the 10-year average of 3,084,000,000 bushels.

Because of the existence of surpluses, the department had set up programs calling for less than 900 million bushels of wheat and less than three billion bushels of corn.

CORN PRICES HIGHER, WHEAT CLOSES DOWN

CHICAGO, July 10 (AP) — Most grains had a steady tone on the Board of Trade today despite a break of several cents at one time in July soybeans.

Hedging pressure forced wheat lower early but reports of a good family flour business produced a rally. Oats eked out new seasonal highs before retreating a bit on profit taking.

Old crop corn was aided by strength in the cash grain market. New crop corn and soybeans advanced slightly despite continued favorable crop growing weather.

WHIRLING DISASTER

Jagged hole in Trans-Canada airliner shows where propeller which broke loose in flight Monday sheared through fuselage killing a woman passenger and injuring five other persons. Blade was torn loose from outer engine pod (extreme left). The Viscount turbo-prop plane was en route from Chicago, Ill., to Toronto, Ont., when the accident occurred. The pilot was able to make a safe landing at Windsor, Ont., where this picture was made.

Brave Wife

Question Period At Bullfight

By Art Buchwald

MADRID.

WE TOOK OUR WIFE to her first bullfight the other day. Like most marriage counselors, we've always maintained that no marriage can really be a happy one until a man and his wife have witnessed a bullfight together. It is the only sport that takes as much courage on the part of the spectators as it does on the part of the participants.

ART BUCHWALD

The Corrida de Toros was jammed when we arrived, the band was playing, the flags were flying and everyone was happy and gay.

"Why, it's just like a football game," our wife said.

The trumpets sounded, the gates on the far side of the bullring opened and the parade of the matadors, banderilleros, picadors, ring servants and Spanish mules came in.

"I didn't realize it was so colorful," our wife said. "Their costumes are beautiful. I would love a Spanish cape like that one for my white evening dress."

AFTER THE FORMALITIES WERE OVER the first bull was sent into the ring.

"Ah," our wife said. "Isn't he sweet. He has a face like a spaniel."

The bull snorted several times and then started charging at the capemen. The matador came in and made several passes with the bull.

A few minutes later the picadors came in on horses.

"What is that silly man on the horse going to do?" she asked.

"He's going to stick his pic into the bull."

"Why?"

"To weaken his shoulder muscles."

"But that's cruel."

We looked around to see if anyone was listening, but fortunately they were all watching the picador.

"Oh, the poor bull."

"Make up your mind," we told her.

"Look, the bull is all red. It looks like blood."

"It is blood."

"Oh dear. I can't look."

"Why?"

"To wear down his strength."

"But the man on the horse did it already. There's blood all over him."

"It isn't the same thing."

Our wife hid her eyes as six banderillas were placed in the bull's back. When she opened them again the matador was out in the ring alone with his red cape, and the bull was charging it.

"When the bull gets that close," she said after one pass, "is that the fault of the matador?"

"No," we told her. "It's the fault of the bull."

Suddenly the bull hooked the matador, lifted him up on his horns and threw him down. Our wife screamed and everyone looked at us. The matador wasn't hurt and got up to face the bull again.

"But," our wife protested, "didn't the bull win the fight when he knocked the man down?"

"The bull never wins the fight. Even if he gores the matador to a pulp he loses in the end."

"Then why do they call it a fight?"

The trumpets sounded and we didn't have to answer the question.

THE MATADOR TOOK OUT his sword and faced the bull.

"What's he going to do with the sword?" our wife asked.

"He's going to stick it in the bull."

"To weaken him some more?"

"No, to kill him."

"Is that because the bull threw him down on the ground?"

"No. Even if the bull hadn't thrown him he would still kill it."

"That's the part I don't understand."

The matador thrust the sword in between the bull's shoulders. The bull staggered around the ring drunkenly. We expected our wife to ask another question but when we turned to say something to her all we could see was her back rushing toward the exit.

But she had been a brave wife almost to the very end and we decided not to be angry with her if she ever came back.

Adolphe Menjou

Hollywood's No. 1 Man of Fashion

By Harold Heffernan

HOLLYWOOD.

MAKE-BELIEVERS at work: The always impeccable Adolphe Menjou sits patiently on the sidelines, just beyond camera range. Even though six weeks of shooting remain, what will be the closing scene for RKO's "Bundle of Joy" is under way—and going into its seventh take.

Adolphe is growing weary. Debbie Reynolds and Eddie Fisher start the scene at one end of the big department store owned by Menjou, walking down the aisle wheeling their baby (a large doll). Menjou is to step in just before the fadeout and take over the carriage-pushing chores.

Though Eddie has already cut the record for the theme song, he sings it anyway with each take. "I get my voice exercise in that way," he says.

HOLLYWOOD'S NO. 1 man of fashion is sporting a smart Homburg and a brown wool coat with black velvet trim. Since he is sitting behind what is the cosmetic department in the store there's a mirror on the wall. Each time he gets up for a take, Adolphe glances in it, straightens his tie and hat.

"When an actor is playing the fastidious type," he explained, "he shouldn't rely on others to do his grooming for him. The make-up men, the wardrobe girl—they all do their jobs well, but they have enough work without giving each actor an individual inspection before each take. That's why I always try to give myself a preening before the scene. In this case, it's just my good luck that the mirror is one of the props."

"I've been threatening for years to return to live work—just for the lark of it," she said. "If I could only find two months time in which to get an act up and rehearsed, I'd like to invade about 15 cities. But if I don't do this, I've made up my mind to one thing, and that is I'm going to sing—not popular songs but offbeat stuff, like modern jazz.

"And I'm always watching TV hoping to see something really good by an author who might be able to whip up a good modern-day script with a jazz background. If I could find that—I know it would be the happiest event in my career."

ON THE OTHER HAND, Cesar Romero, one of filmtown's greatest dancers, wants no part of nitery life. He still refuses to play Las Vegas in the face of $25,000-a-week bait. "And they just won't believe me when I tell them I'm not interested in doing a night club act," chuckled Romero. "I tried it a few years ago and I'll never want to do it again."

The dashing Latin, who started out as a club hoofer, recalled that he broke in an act with four girls in a San Diego nightspot a few years ago.

"It was the hardest thing I ever attempted," he sighed. "I'm too old to do that sort of thing anymore. If you find me in Vegas it will be as a paying customer watching the other guys beating their brains out!"

Some Hints On Use of Casserole

By Edith M. Barber

THE word casserole has crept into our language and to meet this situation all sorts of good and bad food combinations have followed. Our grandmothers actually used the casserole long ere this, but they called it a baking dish.

Or, perhaps that old-fashioned bean pot was the precursor of the modern casserole. There was a mixture of ingredients which we are still using, that good combination of salt pork, molasses and seasoning whose flavor is developed by long baking in its pottery container. If we own one of those old bean pots it may, of course, be used for other types of what we call casserole dishes.

Occasionally, we will find a severe critic — usually among men—of mixtures baked in casseroles. Sometimes, the comment is reasonable. While we like to make use of foods we have on hand, the flavors do not always lend themselves to combining with each other. Often, rice, macaroni or potatoes—all of them bland foods — are used as a base. Seasoning must be expert and appropriate if we are to please the family with a casserole dish.

It is convenient to be able to prepare the ingredients, put them together in a casserole and store this in the refrigerator until time for heating it before the evening meal.

Casserole—Ham and Rice.

Two tablespoons butter or margarine, one tablespoon chopped green pepper, one tablespoon chopped onion, one tablespoon flour, two teaspoons dry mustard, one cup milk, one and one-third cups diced cooked ham, two cups cooked rice, one cup shredded cheese.

Melt butter or margarine and add green pepper and onion. Cook one minute. Stir in flour mixed with mustard. Stir in milk gradually and continue stirring over low heat until smooth. Add cheese, blend and combine with meat and rice. Bake in greased casserole in moderate oven (375 degrees) 30 minutes. Yield: Six servings.

Noodle Casserole.

In above recipe, substitute one package noodles, cooked, for rice. The ham may be replaced by diced cooked veal or chicken.

Summer Separates

Fix It Yourself

Repairing Concrete Walks and Drives.

MOST of us like to get away from the homestead when vacation time comes around but when old Horace Homeowner gets his two weeks with pay you'll find him in the front yard repairing a concrete walk. Sections of the walk cracked a couple of years ago and Horace thought he'd fix things up by giving the sections a coat of mortar. That didn't work and the cracks are as bad as ever now. This year Horace is going to do the job the way it should be done.

First he's going to break up the damaged sections with a sledge hammer. Next he's going to dig the earth out from under this area a few inches and then toss the broken pieces of concrete back in. This is a good way to get rid of them and they will also make a good base for the new concrete slab. They will have to be deep enough, however, to allow a slab at least four inches thick to be poured over them. And before the new slab is poured, the pieces of concrete should be sprayed down with water so that they'll bond to the fresh concrete.

Horace can use a couple of lengths of two-by-four as forms for the edges of the walk. A few stakes driven into the ground will hold the forms solid. A good mixture for the concrete is one part cement, two parts sand and three parts gravel. Pour this into place in small quantities and be sure that it gets around all the broken pieces of concrete. When it's about level with the top of the forms, take a board and work it across the top of the forms, using a sort of sawing motion. This will level off the concrete and also help to make it compact. After it's level and has set for a few minutes, Horace can go at it with a steel trowel and when it's smooth he'll cover it and keep it damp for a week to make the concrete hard.

Let's Explore Your Mind

By Dr. Albert E. Wiggam

Answer to Question 1.

NOT quite, according to several studies. One sociologist found male college students listed qualities desired in a wife as follows: 1. Personality and disposition. 2. Intelligence and education. 3. Health. 4. Beauty. (!) 5. Morality (!) 6. Family background. 7. Similar religion. 8. Near same age. 9. Money. Female students listed qualities in a husband as follows: 1. Intelligence and education. 2. Personality and disposition. 3. Health. 4. Similar religion. 5. Morality (!). 6. Money. 7. Family background. 8. Good looks. 9. Near same age.

Answer to Question 2.

Yes, they can't accept the inevitable without feeling defeated, says W. Clark Ellzey in "How to Keep Romance in Your Marriage." Advertisers and the movies have succeeded so well in making the young woman an ideal that many women strain desperately to look and act young all their lives. A woman can be beautiful at any age, by standards appropriate to her age. Romance doesn't rest upon such flimsy supports as a girlish figure. It stands solidly upon the personality of the mature woman who is, as a person, beautiful.

Answer to Question 3.

No, according to Norma E. Cutts and Nicholas Moseley, in "The Only Child." Parents should leave it up to the child. They may tell him they won't buy ice cream, candy or hobby supplies but should not tell him what to buy. Giving a child a quarter a week and telling him he must put a dime in the church collection, for instance, defeats the purpose of an allowance and encourages him to falsify. As he shows he can spend wisely, the amount can be increased.

Do you have trouble explaining sex to your child? If so, you need the Public Affairs nonprofit booklet, "How to Tell Your Child About Sex." Send 25c (coin only) and your name and address to Dr. A. E. Wiggam, Public Affairs Committee, at the Post-Dispatch.

Tasty Tricks

Mark down this frosting mathematics: To fill and frost a three-layer cake, use a recipe calling for three cups of sifted confectioner's sugar, or three cups sugar (cooked frosting).

Free Parking

By Christopher Billopp

A PERSON who has a true sense of value of money will not pay a large price for space in a parking lot when there is the possibility of parking along the curb free of charge. A person in search of a free parking space will regret not having started out earlier in the day when free spaces were abundant as, apparently, everybody except himself did.

However, he will console himself with the thought that people are by nature restless. It is inconceivable to him that the owners of whole streetsful of cars could leave them there for hours and not think of returning to them. Surely among all of them at least one car owner will, for some reason, be coming back to his car and moving it out of the parking space. It is therefore a mere question of catching an owner in the act and replacing him. That is, unless some other car owner in search of a place drives up and usurps the vacant place just as a person was about to back in.

The person will picture to himself the hundreds of owners of parked cars shopping, attending to business, eating lunch, visiting public libraries and doing all the other things that owners of parked cars might be expected to do. He will keep his eye open for the car owner who has tired of these occupations and is returning to his car.

Yet, though he drives around whole blocks and finds himself lost in the maze of one-way streets, nowhere will he find anybody moving. It seems that today all the owners of parked cars are frozen where they are.

So, reluctantly he will leave his car at a parking lot.

Why is it that, invariably, he will no sooner have done so than he will see the owner of a car pulling out and leaving a space large enough for a station wagon?

LOTS of peculiar characters in Peter De Vries's novel, "The Tunnel of Love." One thinks a seersucker is a goof who spends all his dough on fortune tellers. Another assures folks, "When I wake up and find I have the flu, I know I'm sick." A third keeps asking his analyst, "Have I told you about my aberration?" My favorite, however, is the one who calls his place Moot Point (because there's a legal difficulty about the boundaries and right-of-way) and who, when asked if he ever heard of a dance called the czardas, asks dubiously, "That's by Hoagy Carmichael, isn't it?"

Pogo Politics

By Don Ross

NEW YORK.

THREE men who look like political types have been practicing a windy political rhetoric replete with irrelevancies, nonsequiturs and grandiose promises in preparation for their emergence from the cool dimness of a New York saloon this summer to appear as comic relief in the coverage by the National Broadcasting Co. of the Democratic and Republican nominating conventions.

After the conventions are over, the three will disappear from public view and resume their accustomed lives. One of the men is the co-proprietor of the saloon, and the others customers of the place, a retired Air Force colonel and a publicity man for New York University.

Why did NBC decide to hire these unlikely amateurs instead of a trio of professional actors? Chiefly because Walt Kelly, the creator of Pogo, the comic strip possum, and a fellow patron of the saloon, had decided that they looked and acted like dead ringers, respectively, for a chairman of a national political party, a turn-of-the-century senator, and a ward heeler. He thought that their lack of acting experience would be no deterrent; all they had to do, he decided, was act natural.

KELLY HAD BEEN ASKED by NBC to put on a series of five-minute television shows that could be sandwiched in during the dull intervals of the conventions. Kelly, who is running Pogo for President this year, as he did in 1952, decided to work up some political acts involving his marsupial. His eye lit upon his three friends—the four belong to a luncheon club that meets regularly at the saloon—and he knew he had before him his cast of characters. Kelly, who will appear on the show as Pogo's personal campaign manager, broached the idea to his friends and they, thinking it would be fun, accepted.

"Fitz," said Kelly, interviewed the other day in his studio, "looks like chairman somebody or other. He is a big guy, about 6-foot-3, weighs about 340. He is an overpowering, hearty man with the stamp of success. Also he is a fast thinker and a good man to have on an ad lib show."

Fitz is Tom Fitzpatrick who owns half of the Artists and Writers restaurant in New York, known to newspaper men, magazine writers and publicity men as Bleeck's.

"BROPHY," said Kelly, "is a little guy, maybe 150 pounds and 5-foot-5. I think of him as the ward heeler type." Tom Brophy, who has appeared as a barker at carnivals and done a lot of sports publicity, is currently employed by New York University as a publicity man for its television shows. Brophy is the brother of Ed Brophy, a movie and television character actor, and Jeff Brophy, a night club entertainer.

"Col. Sam Moore is white-haired, imposing, and looks like a thin Warren G. Harding," said Kelly. "He habitually wears dark clothes, a string tie and a black hat. He has a fine rolling voice and talks with a flourish. He reminds you of a senator, a perennial candidate for office. Moore was a balloon officer in the first World War and was the first American to be shot down. In the second World War he spent two years helping to handle air traffic over the Hump. He has also been a newspaper rewrite man and written short stories and radio and vaudeville sketches."

THE FOUR will operate from a smoke-filled hotel room, either a real one or simulated at the studio. Col. Moore will wear his usual string tie, frock coat and a fancy vest. Fitz, who will do a lot of nervous pacing as befits a national chairman at convention time, will have a carnation in his lapel and a straw hat tipped back on his head. Brophy, the ward heeler, will constantly munch on carrots, celery or walnuts.

Several unusual political charts will be hung on the walls. One will show the United States divided into areas labeled: "Mine," "Cloudy," "His" and "? (to be fixed)." Another will show graphs of rainfall and population with additional lines for natural gas, the United Nations and purchasing power at Christmas time. No one should try to make sense out of this chart because it hasn't any.

THE SKETCHES will be mostly ad lib, but Kelly and his friends have worked out a few skits to show NBC the sort of thing they will be doing. In one, Kelly points out that the possum has been in this country for 2,000,000 years. Fitz says: "Then nobody can question the citizenship of our candidate. He's been here long enough to learn 'The Star Spangled Banner' forward and backward."

"It sounds better forward," Brophy observes.

Col. Moore, who is slightly befuddled, jumps in to denounce Fitz for advocating that the national anthem be sung backward.

"We start out very seriously as though we knew what we were talking about," said Kelly. "The first thing you know somebody makes a slightly goofy statement and then we get off the beam in a weird sort of way. After that, there's complete chaos and confusion."

Kelly intends to discuss such things as the tariff, juvenile delinquency and the writing of an acceptance speech.

Beauty After 40

By Edyth Thornton McLeod

"I AM 48, have medium brown hair and brown eyes. What color should I wear to my daughter's wedding? I don't want to wear black. It's an evening affair in the late summer; would it be correct to wear white shoes? —C.J.M."

If the wedding is formal and the bride wears the traditional white wedding gown, you should wear a formal dress of lace, chiffon or organza. You can choose any becoming color, although I think beige or a soft blue would be the most flattering. White shoes are good only if they go with your dress. In this instance, your shoes should be dressy of a sandal type or a classic pump, and your gloves should match your shoes.

"I am invited to a formal dance and would like to know just what I should wear and also if I should wear a hat. I am 45, and only 4 feet 11 inches tall with my shoes on. —Mrs. Ann S."

You should accent your diminutive figure. For a formal dance you should wear an evening gown, as pretty a one as you can afford. Your dress can be what we call waltz length and you can also have a stole or a bolero to go with it, making it useful for many occasions. As to color, you can choose your favorite, but pale gray is very lovely and takes color accents so beautifully. And no hat!

"I have a set of jewelry with a cameo motif in black and gold. It seems so much when I wear all the pieces. I only wear black dresses. Could I combine something else with the necklace?—Alice H."

Good fashion would be to wear the necklace only with plain gold earrings or wear the cameo earrings and the pin, or the bracelet and the necklace. You can combine plain gold or black pieces effectively.

Precautions for Young and Old

Summertime Creates Special Problems for Both Infants, Aged Persons—Helpful Advice

By E. Hunter Wilson, M.D.

This is the third and last article in a series on the care of your health during the hot summer months. Today's article suggests safeguards for the infants and the elders.

IN the preceding articles the major dangers to the enjoyment of good health in the summertime have been described, and in a general way the measures that should be taken by the average healthy adult to avoid them have been pointed out. The measures discussed, however, need amplification to two other phases of normal life, namely, the very young and the old. In these age groups susceptibility to certain prevalent summer illnesses is increased, and, in addition, the illness contracted is likely to be more serious in these groups than in the middle years.

For healthy children the strictest precautions should be observed in those up to 2 years of age, the period of infancy. Following that they may be relaxed somewhat up to 5 years of age, and after 5 such precautions may be decreased steadily up to the age of 14. At this age the child becomes "adult" in his physical reactions to illness.

Sunlight and fresh air are good for children, and undoubtedly help to maintain their health. A healthy infant can be brought outside in warm weather safely after about two weeks of age. However, especially during his first two years, great care should be taken to avoid overheating from any source, for during this time the baby has decreased ability to control his body temperature.

Up until the age of two, the baby should be exposed to the sun only in the morning or in the late afternoon, avoiding the excessive heat of midday. It is recommended that the initial exposure be not more than about two minutes to the back and two minutes to the front, on the first day, and should be increased by about the same amount during the following days. Babies this age should probably never have more than one hour a day of exposure to the sun in the summertime. Their eyes should be protected by a shade at all times during such exposure.

The sunbath should be taken where the air can cool the child. If you are at the beach, remember that the ultra-violet rays which cause sunburn are reflected from the sand and water, and can burn the child's sensitive skin even though he is under a beach umbrella. It is probably best to keep the baby under two years of age off the beach entirely.

After the age of two, the child may be allowed slowly increasing exposure to the sun as age increases, but he should be protected with hats and limited exposure up until the school years, when he becomes better able to tolerate heat. Until about five years of age, the baby's skin is also sensitive to the moisture of perspiration so that overdressing or allowing moist or soiled articles of clothing to remain on for long periods should be avoided. Frequent bathing is advised.

Gastroenteritis is common in children, and becomes of more serious consequence the younger the child is. The symptoms of vomiting and diarrhea lead to loss of vital body fluids, and an attack that might be mild to an adult could be fatal to a child. For this reason, all of the precautions mentioned in a previous article for guarding against gastroenteritis should be even more strictly observed in children.

Babies should certainly not be given unpasteurized milk. The milk should be boiled immediately before preparation of the formula, and care should be taken not to allow the formula to sit at room temperature for longer than an hour or so before using.

For older children, as in the case of adults, great care should be taken to provide clean preparation and refrigeration of such food as salads, chicken, ham, custard and pastries, for such foods welcome bacterial growth.

Finally, especially in babies under two years of age, water should be offered frequently beween feedings during hot weather, as perspiration increases bodily needs for water.

The problem in older people is somewhat similar, but for different reasons. As a general rule, older people react more slowly, and adapt less easily, to any change in environment or living conditions than do persons in the younger age groups. This means that people over the age of 60 or 65 have more difficulty and take longer becoming adjusted, to the increased temperatures of summertime. It has been shown that the death rate of older people is sometimes doubled during heat waves of summer.

Older persons are particularly susceptible to heat stroke and heat exhaustion because their body responses to heat are delayed, and they cannot handle it as well. But not only may heat have a direct adverse effect on them, it may also exert injurious indirect effects by increasing the load on the heart, and by rendering them more susceptible to infections.

Thus, it is a good idea for the aged to treat the summertime with great respect. To receive adequate salt and water intake, you should take one or two salt tablets a day, unless you are on a salt-free diet, and drink at least eight glasses of fluid. Exposure to the heat of midday should be limited to no more than a half-hour.

ABOVE all, physical activity should be curtailed to the minimum during the summer heat wave, for this more than anything else can lead to fatal consequences in the elderly person. There is a great tendency, when taking a "relaxing" summer vacation, to exert oneself twice as strenuously as during the rest of the year. It should be remembered that your heart can't tell the difference between playing and working, and, no matter how great the difference feels to you, to your heart it's all work.

By the age of 60, it's time you began taking your vacations together—you and your heart. It can be done.

Now let's dwell for a moment on the implication of hot weather for those who already have some underlying condition which may be made worse, or more difficult to manage, during the summer. There are only two such conditions that are at all common. The first is diabetes, and the second is heart trouble.

Does diabetes prevent a person from enjoying any of the things during the summer that he ordinarily would enjoy if he did not have diabetes? The answer is "no."

There is no reason why a person with uncomplicated diabetes cannot have just as many activities, and in as full a measure, as persons who do not suffer from it. The only stipulation is that he must be a little more careful.

Diabetes is a condition in which blood sugar cannot be used efficiently. Because of this, sugar piles up in the blood, and then spills over and out of the body into the urine. With each molecule of sugar that is lost this way, molecules of water and salt are carried away with it, so that if much sugar is lost the body becomes depleted of salt and water, which is called "dehydration."

As this process of dehydration develops, the kidneys no longer have enough water to use to excrete acid by-products of bodily functions, and a condition known as acidosis appears, of which the symptoms are drowsiness, weakness, and coma. Insulin in proper amounts, and diets with restricted quantities of sugar, prevent much loss of sugar in the urine and formation of acid products, and so ward off dehydration and acidosis.

Now, we have already seen that the heat of summer also tends to cause dehydration in an unacclimated person through loss of salt and water in the sweat. When this extra burden is added to a diabetic, it is clear that he is much more susceptible to dehydration, because he has two ways in which it can happen.

THIS is perhaps oversimplifying the problem, but for practical purposes it points up certain of the precautions that should be taken in summertime by persons with diabetes.

First, if exposure to heat or physical exercise is planned, diabetics should always take several salt tablets and drink plenty of water before and during the exposure. Second, the need for gradual "acclimatization" is even more important to them than to other people. Third, urine examination during the summer should be performed more rigorously than at other times, at least once a day.

It should be pointed out also that physical exercise acts as added insulin in lowering the blood sugar, and, if exertion is planned, the daily insulin should be reduced somewhat, and meals should not be delayed. Adequate care of the feet—keeping them clean and dry—is another important point, for athlete's foot can be severe in persons with diabetes.

TURNING our attention now to persons who have heart trouble, this problem can be discussed only in the most general terms in this limited space. Much depends on what type of heart trouble a person has, and how severe it is, in determining what he can or should do to avoid trouble in the summertime.

It has already been stated that heat decreases the efficiency with which an unacclimatized person can perform a given task. This means that the heart must beat faster and harder in hot weather than in cold to do the same job, if the persons has not gotten adjusted to the heat.

For this reason, every person who has heart trouble should be particularly careful about exposure to heat or exercise until he has gotten acclimatized. Again, this means getting used to the temperature change slowly, by short, limited daily exposures, and for people with heart trouble this should probably take a week or so. Acclimatization allows the heart rate for a given task to return to normal, and thereby takes a burden off the heart.

Many people with heart trouble are on a low salt diet. Here again, much depends on exactly how low the salt intake is, and what other conditions are present, as to the precaution that should be taken. In these cases, it is best to get the advice of your doctor, if you are planning exposure to the heat, as to how much your salt intake should be increased, and when.

To summarize briefly: most of the illnesses of summer can be prevented by a little knowledge, patience and care. The mixture can keep you healthy.

Wiltwyck School Picnic

By Eleanor Roosevelt

NEW YORK.

IN spite of gray skies, we decided to have the Wiltwyck School picnic Saturday morning.

It was not actually raining, as it was on Thursday and Friday, and we hoped it would hold off until after the children had at least eaten their picnic lunch, as they then could go over to the Library. Only once before have we had the picnic when it rained, and then we fed the children under every shelter we could find, not having any rooms big enough to hold them all.

Now there are more boys in the school than there were then, and while some 30 had gone home because of the delays, we still had between 125 and 130 which, together with our own family and guests, brought the gathering up to well over 150 people who had to be served.

AS A RULE, after they have eaten—and these youngsters really eat—they sit under the trees and I read them a story. At their request, it is usually the same one, Kipling's "How the Elephant Got His Trunk."

Hot dogs usually run two to three apiece and some boys have been known to eat four. This year I gave them potato chips instead of macaroni, because I thought it would be easier to manage. They always have corn on the cob, which we put in our deep freeze every season, planning ahead for the picnic of the coming year.

Two kinds of salads—potato and vegetable—and then ice cream and cupcakes, with at least two helpings all around, with gallons of milk and coffee for the grownups, are on the menu from year to year.

Then we have games, for which little bundles of lollipops are the prizes. Then they go over to visit the Memorial Library.

That ends the day's outing for the boys. But I know it means a good deal to them, for whenever I see them during the year, they ask me if we are going to have the picnic when summer comes.

EVERYBODY MUST BE sympathetic with the poor mother who is waiting so anxiously in the hope that her kidnaped baby will be returned to her. It seems incredible that anyone could withstand her pleadings.

I have never been able to understand the kind of person who could take a helpless child and hold him or her for ransom. Yet there have been many of these cases. And, as a rule, if money was the object, the kidnaper rarely achieved his objective, because if he takes the money, he is bound to be caught. The result is that he rarely takes the money.

If he is not caught, one seldom knows what happens to the child. It seems to me one of the most cruel of all crimes.

If your hand is the equal of a sound opening bid and you have no long suit, bid two in the opponents' suit. You are aiming for game and this bid will enable you and your partner to test out several suits until the best spot is found. Of course, the bid in the opponents' suit is absolutely forcing.

If you have two and a half honor tricks (about 11 or 12 points) and your best suit is four long, bid one more than necessary in that suit. Do the same with two honor tricks (about nine or 10 points) and a five-card suit—or with slightly less if you have a fair six-card suit.

With less than the above, bid as little as possible. None of these bids of one more than necessary is absolutely forcing. They do, however, represent a strong urge to partner to bid again unless his double was a rock-bottom minimum.

In today's deal Mr. Dale believed he did not have quite enough to force the bidding to game. He wasn't bad in high cards, but he had a bare two and a half honor tricks, no good intermediate cards, poor distribution for suit play and no semblance of a stopper in the opponents' suit.

He also considered this point—that Mr. Champion's non-vulnerable double of one club might be somewhat shaded.

Miss Pierce Married In Florida Ceremony

By Marilee Chadeayne Martin

A FASHIONABLE WEDDING in Miami Beach, Fla., Sunday afternoon was that of Miss Frances Parsons Pierce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius E. Pierce, former St. Louisans, and George Alva Chatfield Jr., a second lieutenant in the Air Force. The ceremony took place at All Souls' Episcopal Church after which the bride's parents gave a reception at the Bath Club, where just seven months ago she made her debut at two parties, a holiday ball and New Year's day reception.

For her wedding the former Miss Pierce chose silk organdy with peau de soie inset in wide bands below the hipline, drawn into large poufs at back and descending into a chapel train. The low round neckline was appliqued with embroidered roses which also trimmed the small cap holding the bride's three-tiered veil. She carried white roses.

Her attendants were in royal blue chiffon sheaths, with flowing back panels, and had white picture straw hats and bouquets of white gladiolas. They were Mrs. C. Allen Morehead Jr., matron of honor, and Miss Constance Vereen, Miss Diane Dodge, Miss Frances Townley and Miss Louanna Owens of Haverford, Pa., who is known to St. Louisans since she was the roommate at Chatham (Va.) Hall of Miss Mimi Norcross and has visited her in St. Louis.

Lt. Chatfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Chatfield of Miami, was attended by his father as best man. Ushers included Joseph Chatfield, his brother; Ens. Thomas M. Pierce III, the bride's brother, a naval flyer stationed at Miramar Navy Base, San Diego, Calif.; David Bothwell, Robert Milledge, James H. Brinson Jr. and Henry C. Richardson Jr. of West Palm Beach.

A profusion of white roses decorated the Bath Club for the reception and were arranged with white china cupids for a centerpiece on the bridal table.

The bride, who is related to many prominent St. Louis families, is the granddaughter of Mrs. Thomas Murray Pierce, 4931 Lindell boulevard, whom she has visited, and of Mrs. John B. Denvir, a former St. Louisan who with Mr. Denvir makes her home in Miami Beach. Her mother was the former Miss Jane Parsons of St. Louis. She is a great-niece of Mrs. John Stewart Tritle of St. Louis, Mrs. Arthur M. Clifford of Pasadena, Calif., and Karl Hoblitzelle of Dallas, both former St. Louisans, and Dr. Robert J. Terry, who lives at the University Club. An aunt is Mrs. Milton Mendle of St. Louis and an uncle, Dickson Pierce, who lives in California.

The former Miss Pierce received her education at Knox School, St. James, N.Y.; Ethel Walker School, Simsbury, Conn., and Pine Manor Junior College, Wellesley, Mass. Lt. Chatfield was graduated from the University of Florida, Gainesville, a year ago. He and his bride will live in Greenville, Miss., where he will be stationed, until after Christmas.

Bridal Attendants for Miss Marianna Crego.

MISS MARIANNA MARCH CREGO, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Harrison Crego, 2 Loren Woods, Ladue, has selected her attendants for her wedding Saturday night, Sept. 1, to Dr. Max Allen Heeb. Her sister, Mrs. Donald George Brown (Carolyn Crego), will be matron of honor. Bridesmaids will be a younger sister, Miss Martha Sue Crego; Miss Cara Ann Cameron, Medland, Tex.; Miss Lois McGourty Stamford, Conn.; Miss Elaine Traylor, Wellesley Hills, Mass., and Miss Jean Russell, St. Louis. Miss McGourty and Miss Traylor were classmates of the prospective bride at Bradford (Mass.) Junior College and Miss Crego and Miss Cameron were classmates at the University of Colorado, Boulder, last year.

—Jules Pierlow Photograph.

MRS. BROWN . . . TO BE HONOR ATTENDANT.

Dr. Heeb, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Heeb, Chaffee, Mo., will announce his attendants later. The 8 o'clock ceremony will take place at Bethel Lutheran Church with the Rev. George A. Losse officiating. Afterward Dr. and Mrs. Crego will give a reception at Le Chateau.

Late August Wedding in Montana.

KONA RANCH, home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Thurman Latta near Missoula, Mont., will be the scene of the wedding Tuesday evening, Aug. 28, of the Lattas' daughter, Miss Carol Ann Latta, and Thomas Kerwin Spencer of St. Louis. The ceremony is to be performed at sunset, about 7 o'clock, by the Rev. Dr. Bennett of the Episcopal Church in Missoula, and a reception will follow. The Lattas made their home here at 15 Oakleigh lane, Ladue, until four years ago. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Page Spencer, 16 Dromara road, Ladue.

Miss Latta has chosen as her maid of honor Miss Nancy Calvin, a former classmate at Iowa State College, Ames, from which both were graduated this June. Her cousin, Sally Coultas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight W. Coultas Jr., 643 East Monroe avenue, Kirkwood, will be junior bridesmaid. Best man will be Benjamin M. Bishop of St. Louis, former classmate of Mr. Spencer at John Burroughs. Robert Allen Latta of Missoula, brother of the bride-to-be, will be groomsman.

A large group of St. Louisans will go to Missoula for the wedding, including Mr. and Mrs. Spencer and their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Murphy (Joan Spencer), 1327 McCutcheon road, Richmond Heights; Mr. and Mrs. Coultas with Sally, Mr. and Mrs. Bishop of Manhasset Village, Mr. and Mrs. Wilburn A. Duncan, 10 Winnetka lane, Glendale, and Mr. and Mrs. Elwood A. Rothaus, 14 Mary Hill, Ladue, with their two daughters, Miss Joan and Carol Rothaus, who have been frequent visitors at the Latta ranch.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer will depart in two weeks for the Diamond J Ranch at Ennis, Mont., also in western Montana, and will be there until shortly before the wedding. In Missoula they and the St. Louis contingent will be guests at the Florence Hotel where Mr. and Mrs. Spencer will give a dinner Sunday night, Aug. 26. The next evening the Lattas will give a chuck wagon dinner after the rehearsal at their ranch.

On Caribbean Cruise

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT E. SONTAG, 13 ALGONQUINWOOD, WEBSTER GROVES, PHOTOGRAPHED ABOARD THE A. S. ALCOA CORSAIR AT THE START OF A 16-DAY CRUISE IN THE CARIBBEAN, DURING WHICH THEY VISITED JAMAICA, THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC, TRINIDAD AND VENEZUELA. THEY WILL RETURN HOME THIS WEEK.

Grace-Merz Wedding Takes Place in East; St. Louisans Attend

SEVERAL St. Louisans attended the wedding of Miss Ann Loreane Merz and Richard Harold Grace which took place at noon Saturday, June 16, at St. Paul's Evangelical Church, Glenside, Pa. Afterward the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Schuler Merz Jr., Wyncote, Pa., gave a reception at Old Mill Manor House, Ambler, Pa. The bridegroom is the son of Thomas Logan Grace, 3848 Utah place, and the late Mrs. Grace.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white embroidered organdy gown, ballerina length, and an illusion veil. Her bouquet was white roses, stephanotis and baby's breath. Mrs. Leroy Leidenberger, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor and Mary Patricia Fuchs, daughter of Mr. Grace's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Fuchs, St. Louis, was flower girl. The matron of honor wore a white organdy dress over pale green and carried pink roses while the flower girl was in a white embroidered organdy frock and carried a basket of pink rosebuds and baby's breath.

George Schuler Merz Jr. was best man for Mr. Grace and Herbert E. Kuhn, Abington, Pa., and Mr. Fuchs were ushers. The Rev. Alvin H. Butz Jr. officiated.

Mr. Grace and his bride will spend about six weeks at Cape Cod and Maine resorts and will live in St. Louis. The former Miss Merz is a graduate of Bryn Mawr College and received her M.A. degree at Washington University School of Medicine. Mr. Grace is also a graduate of Washington University.

In addition to the bridegroom's father and Mr. and Mrs. Fuchs, St. Louisans attending the wedding were Miss Jane Harris and Miss Marjorie Sussman.

Nadine Ahlert Plans Wedding in November

AT a luncheon given recently by Mrs. Buena V. Ahlert, 7236 Tulane avenue, University City, announcement was made of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Nadine Ann Ahlert, to John Charles Sommers Jr. The wedding is planned for Nov. 24 at Christ the King Church.

Sister of Mrs. Robert J. McCarthy (Roberta Ahlert), a May bride, Miss Ahlert attended Fontbonne College. Mr. Sommers, son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Sommers, 7724 Country Club Court, Clayton, attended St. Louis University Schools of Arts and Science and Commerce and Finance. He is the brother of Robert L. Thomas, Miss Susan Sommers and Mrs. Bertrand C. Faherty.

Martha Carr's OPINION

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

Dear Martha:

MY daughter married a Mama's boy who just can't seem to make a decision without his mother's help. But she isn't content just with running his life. Now that he is married, Mama has to run my daughter's life, too.

She helps my daughter buy all her clothes, helps select the furniture, found a larger apartment for them when their baby was born, stayed over there until my daughter was home from the hospital and just took over. My daughter always confided in me before she was married and we went shopping together and were very close. Now she has grown away from me and, although there has never been any quarrel, I just don't feel welcome in her home. His mother is always there and I am made to feel that I'm an outsider while she is in charge.

WORRIED MOM.

Your daughter and her husband would be infinitely better off if neither set of in-laws tried to boss them around or make their decisions for them. But your daughter, even though she doesn't want to hurt you by turning her back on you, may feel that she almost has to go along with her mother-in-law's opinion or risk a family quarrel. Look at her side of it and stand ready to help her if she asks. Don't make it any more awkward for her than it already is by getting at sword's points with her husband's family.

Dear Martha:

THE NEXT TIME you have letters from young adults asking where they may make social contacts with others of their own age we would be glad if you would mention us—"The Singlers" of Grace Methodist Church, Skinker boulevard and Waterman avenue. Grace Church also has a group for college age called "The Kindlers," but those in our group are mostly employed people of the ages of 25 through the 30s. We meet each Sunday at 7 p.m. in the parlor of our church, and we have a variety of activities both social and educational. We have devotions at most of our meetings and engage in some altruistic projects, but do not try to evangelize. Anyone coming to our group for the first time might do well to call the church in advance (VOlunteer 3-1992), or come to the morning service, in order to make sure that we are on our regular schedule, since picnics and outings sometimes cause a variation in our plans. We will be especially delighted if any new young men join us, for just at present we really need a few more to balance our group.

PAT BEVER,
Social Chairman of Singlers.

Dear Martha:

WHAT IS YOUR advice in a situation like this? Our daughter is to be married in early fall and although it is our understanding that the bride's parents are responsible for the wedding, the groom's mother insists on planning the entire ceremony and all the other events such as the reception, rehearsal dinner, etc. Am I right in thinking that she should have nothing to say about this? MOTHER.

It is true that the bride's family is responsible for the wedding but in the last analysis both the bride and bridegroom should do the major part of the planning. However, the fact that he should be consulted and his wishes respected doesn't mean that his mother should be doing all the arranging. I think your daughter will have to explain to her fiance that, as much as she appreciates his mother's help and concern, she feels that her parents should have a larger voice inasmuch as they are paying for it. But try to resolve the difficulty without a family quarrel.

Send today for Martha Carr's free leaflet of party games for children, "Let's Have a Party." Please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

Bored Boarder

By Ruth Millett

IF your husband acts like a bored boarder in his own home, maybe you ought to put him to work.

A wife writes: "My husband seems restless and bored around home. I have tried to make our home comfortable.

RUTH MILLETT

I have his meals on time, never ask him to do anything around the house or for the children. In fact, I have done everything I know to make home a place where he can relax and enjoy being. Instead he acts just plain bored. Where have I failed?"

Probably in making things so easy that they are downright dull.

Why not try drawing him into the activity of your home, instead of treating him like a star boarder?

Get him out in the kitchen when you are in the middle of cooking some new dish with an intriguing name. Let him sniff and taste and offer suggestions. Many a husband has been turned into a part-time chef by just such strategy.

TELL HIM YOU need his help with the children when some problem comes up instead of quietly handling the matter yourself. Get him to fix a toy, help Junior with his homework or build a doll house for Sally.

When his next birthday rolls around get him some tools and ask him if he thinks he can build a bookshelf for the children's room. Any man, asked if he can build something, is more than likely going to say "of course" if only to keep from feeling like less of a man.

Find out what he is interested in that he can do at home. Just because he has never had a hobby doesn't mean that he couldn't get interested in one with a little encouragement.

Encourage the couples you know he enjoys to drop in after dinner occasionally.

There are many ways you can pull that man of yours into the center of family living. If he has been sitting on the sidelines, no wonder he is bored.

Social Problems

By Emily Post

A LETTER in today's mail describes a very difficult situation: "The husband of friends of ours is a salesman for a washing machine company. He works on a commission basis. I need a washing machine very badly, but I do not happen to like the make this friend is selling. I much prefer another make but my husband thinks it would be very disloyal to this friend to buy a machine from a competitive company and will result in the loss of friendship. Are we bound by friendship to buy the washing machine from him?

Unless, after you tell him of your preferences for his competitor's machine, he assures you that his feelings will not be hurt, I am sorry to say that you would run the risk of losing his friendship—especially if he is a super-sensitive person.

Of Course, You Married a Good Man

But Not So Good That He Can't Be Improved—Here's How

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

A WIFE CAN'T CHANGE HER HUSBAND VERY MUCH. BUT SHE MAY BE ABLE TO CHANGE HERSELF.

YOU married him because he is a good man—but not so good that he still can't be improved. How will you go about improving him?

That's the question that every bride faces, whether she puts it in so many words or just has it in the back of her mind. Sometimes husbands have the same idea. I remember one who came to see me—really because his wife had come first, and I asked him to tell his side of the story. He was very affable.

"Glad to meet you, Dr. Popenoe," he said. "Fine work you're doing here. But really, there's no need for us to be here. Why, there wouldn't be a bit of trouble in our home, if my wife would only do what I tell her to!"

BUT it's the wife who, even on the verdict of women themselves, wants to improve her husband. She can do it, too—particularly by setting him a good example. She should recognize, however, that she isn't going to be able to change his basic personality very much—except for the worse. Maybe she can hound and nag him until he is nearer than before, but she's not likely to make him sweeter that way.

Why does she keep after him so persistently, in so many cases? Because she tells herself that, "This is too important to me to ignore. It's absolutely necessary that I make him a better man," in this or that way. Actually, it may not be necessary to her at all. Maybe she just wants to be boss.

No, she can't change him very much. But she may be able to change herself. That will be a start in the right direction.

SHE should follow this course (and the husband, for his part, should of course do the same):

Ask yourself whether you are responsible for any unsatisfactory behavior on the part of the spouse. If so, change.

Ask yourself whether outside conditions are to blame—his health, the nature of his work, or his relatives and friends, for instance. If so, find out how he would like to meet the difficulty, and help him to do so—stand by him loyallty while he works out his own plans.

Ask yourself whether any of the faults of which you complain are actually nothing but the peculiarities of the whole sex, or even of the whole human race. If so, smile.

Meanwhile, make yourself as good a wife in every way, as possible. It will be strange if he doesn't respond to that.

The Little Woman

Dismal Future for Modern Living

By Clarissa Start

WHAT won't those builders think of next? Now it's the Sceneramic House, unveiled in Columbus, O., the other day.

Clarissa Start.

A house with a second - story picture window living room which rotates so that its occupants have a 360-degree view of the countryside. The first floor has three bedrooms, two baths, and a kitchen, with a spiral staircase which leads to the center of the living room. This room operates on an electric motor, revolves on 24 wheels which ride a circular track and can make one revolution per minute at top speed. Whatever that means.

What it means in terms of everyday living is pretty dismaying, in our opinion. Let us look in, for example, on the first occupants of the Sceneramic House who are giving their first dinner party for another couple. The male guest speaks first.

Male Guest: Heh heh, George, you must have made these martinis pretty strong. I could've sworn the living room moved just then. Host (proudly): It did move, J. D. It's a rotating living room, operates on an electric motor revolving on 24 wheels which ride a circular track and can make one revolution per minute at top speed. Wanna come downstairs and take a look at the mechanism? Male Guest: Sure thing. (The men leave.)

Hostess: Isn't it ghastly? But then all the new houses are ghastly. You should have seen some of the others they showed us—$45,000 and no bigger than this.

Female Guest: Well, at least you have a view, sort of.

Hostess: You mean we had a view, before the builder knocked down all the trees. On the south we have burned sod, on the west bare clay, on the north bare clay, but on the east—whoops, we just passed it—on the east, we have two new trees which you should be able to see in 20 years. Provided the rotating motor's still working. We have the maintenance man out every week for that thing.

Female Guest: Just one thing bothers me, Jan. How do you keep that picture window clean?

Hostess: That's the worst of it. We've lost three cleaning women. Just as they get up on the ladder and have the hose aimed at the window, George

FEMALE GUEST: Say, Jane, did you read about that conference they had in Washington where they invited all those housewives to tell what they really wanted in houses?

Hostess: Sure I do. They said today's houses are too small, don't have enough room for eating, family activity and privacy.

Female Guest: And didn't they list their pet peeves?

Male Guest (entering through trap door): Yessiree, George, that's some classy layout you've got there. A revolving picture window. I'll be darned. What'll they think of next?

The two women look at each other and smile — but rather bleakly.

Points for Parents

By Edyth Thomas Wallace

NOT THIS

Mother: "You must love your father more than you do me because you always listen to him and pay no attention to what I say."

THIS

Mother: "I've decided you listen to what Dad says more than you do to me because you do not hear his voice as must as you do mine."

For Broiler-Fryers

Some good cooks like to marinate broiler-fryers (cut into pieces) in buttermilk overnight. When ready to use, drain, coat with seasoned flour and fry in shallow fat.

GAS PERMIT HOLDERS FIND IT PAYS TO INVESTIGATE

WILLIAMSON GASAVER De Luxe Gas Furnace
The Williamson Gasaver De Luxe Furnace, unlike ordinary gas furnaces, is controlled by an inside and outside thermostat and has a two-stage burner and two-speed blower*. During 70 to 90% of the heating season when temperatures are above 30 degrees, the furnace operates on half fuel input and half speed blower*. Hot and cold heating cycles are eliminated, and an even warmth is obtained along with fuel savings you have never before experienced. Phone today for all the facts without obligation.
* Blower on forced-air models only.

What wives don't know about sex

Many women are hampered by ignorance and inhibitions in their marital relations, and this can wreck the most promising marriage, says eminent physician and marriage counselor Dr. Abraham Stone.

Uncle Ray's Column

By Ramon Coffman

AN interesting question has come from a girl named Evelyn. She asks:

"Is there a top to the earth?"

Usually we think of the North Pole as "the top of the world" but that depends on the viewpoint.

Recently I was asked whether there actually is a pole at the North Pole. The answer is "No," and in the same way we may say that nothing of the sort exists at the South Pole, unless we could give the name to the staff of a flag. You may recall that Amundsen, the explorer, set up the Norwegian flag when he reached the South Pole.

Instead of being a pole, the North Pole is a point, or a spot. When Robert E. Peary stood on the spot which he judged to be the exact geographical North Pole, he could look up at the North Star. When he looked anywhere along the surface of the ice-covered area, he was gazing southward.

Still we seem to be without a good answer to the question about the top of the earth. If a person, out in space, gazed at the earth from one viewpoint, the top might seem to be the North Pole. From a different position, he would have equal reason to call the South Pole the "top."

One day, in a school room, I asked the children to show me a point on the earth where we could say that a man, raising his hand above his head, would point "upward." North America was named, and I drew a figure at a place on a circle drawn on the blackboard to represent the earth.

Then I drew a figure of a man living in Australia, and he pointed in the opposite direction to show where "up" was.

AFTER A STUDY OF THIS DIAGRAM, CAN YOU TELL THE TRUE DIRECTION OF "UP"?

I showed Peary at the North Pole pointing upward, and Amundsen doing the same at the South Pole. When I added figures in Asia, Africa and South America, the pupils laughed, showing amusement and astonishment.
